Letter from the President

This year the RCSL meeting will take place in Oñati, jointly with the 20th anniversary of the International Institute for the Sociology of Law. The meeting and the anniversary will be a big event, which illustrates the strong links between the RCSL and the Institute. The RCSL and the Basque Government can be proud of their creation. The Institute has become a successful and recognized institution, thanks to the involvement of all the people - directors, permanent staff members, professors and other scholars - who have contributed to its development and to the support of the Basque Government. Scholars and students come from all parts of the world. The RCSL is closely associated with the running of the Institute, through taking part actively in the Oñati committees, making proposals for the appointment of the scientific director and participating in the Governing Board. Long life to the IISJ!

Many people are expected to participate to the RCSL meeting that will be the 46th of the quite long history of the RCSL and the third one in Oñati (the previous were in 1993 and 2000) The programme is very promising. A first draft is available in this Newsletter. There will be a business meeting and those of you who are coming to Oñati are warmly invited to attend.

At the July meeting we will know the names of the new RCSL President and of the new Board members. The elections are in progress. But, in order to fit with the ISA terms, and if it is accepted by the members, the term of the current Board and President will continue until July 2010. Hence the new team will begin its term in 2010, for four years. Many people have expressed a wish to become members of the board and this is excellent news!

We are still in the process of reforming our governing statute. It has been a long and difficult process. There have been many discussions with the ISA and we are waiting for the final approval by the ISA executive committee. As the meeting of this committee was too late for our election, we decided to separate the approval of the amended statute and the elections. So there will be another vote this year probably by electronic procedure (if this small amendment is accepted).

We are looking forward to seeing you in Oñati!

THE 2009 RCSL ELECTIONS

In 2009 the Research Committee on Sociology of Law is renewing its Board and electing the new RCSL President. A proposal to amend the RCSL Statute has also been put forward, and will come into force if approved by 2/3 of the voting members.

For this election, we decided to adopt a different system of sending out the ballots in order to speed up the procedure. If you agreed to use the ballot received by e-mail, please follow the instructions. If you did not agree, you should have already received your ballot by post. In any case, in order to be valid, your ballot needs to reach Oñati by post by July 3rd.

Please note that if the first Statute amendment is approved, the new Board will take charge in 2010 (and not in 2009), since the new article 5 of the Statute provides for an extension of the term to 4 years, in order to conform with the International Sociological Association rules.

“8.1. Proposals for amendment to the statutes can be submitted by any member of the Board, or by any five members in good standing of RC12. They shall be collected by the secretary, then submitted first to the Board for discussion and subsequently to the members for a vote through a postal ballot or by electronic procedure, preferably in the election year

The "RENATO TREVES" INTERNATIONAL PHD PROGRAMME IN LAW AND SOCIETY

The "Renato Treves" International PhD Programme in Law and Society is organised by a consortium of universities whose members include the University of Milan as the central and administrative base, the University of Antwerp, the University of Bologna, the Carlos III University of Madrid, the University of Lund, the University of the Basque Country, the International Institute for the Sociology of Law of Oñati, the Carlo Bo University of Urbino, the University of Insubria, the University of Milan-Bicocca and the Italian Centro nazionale di prevenzione e difesa sociale.

All the partner universities contribute to organising the body of lecturers. The University of the Basque Country and the International Institute for the Sociology of Law of Oñati contribute with the University of Milan to organising a Masters in Sociology of Law, which is considered to be an integral part of the PhD programme.

Held periodically in the form of English-language seminars at the various universities belonging to the consortium, the courses are designed to train individuals not only to be expert in contextualised research into legal institutions, but also to be aware of the ethical and political dimension of the subject matter studied. Provision is made for a suitable degree of mobility on the part of lecturers and students, while the operative strengths of each consortium member are taken into consideration when allotting technical and administrative tasks. Lecturer mobility is limited to relatively short periods during the courses and meetings, while students spend longer periods at the various centres or locations where they conduct their respective research projects.

Responsibility for the programme is vested in a college of lecturers, which appoints a tutor and a joint tutor for each individual research project. These tutors monitor the project, reporting back regularly to the college, which expresses an annual appraisal on the progress achieved and a final appraisal at the end of the curriculum. Research projects must lead to a thesis of appreciable length (a maximum of 250-300 pp.), which are also appraised for their potential for publication. While every attempt is made to respect each student's native language, the use of English is preferred.

THE MEETING OF THE GROUP ON SOCIOLOGY OF LAW AND JUSTICE (RT13) OF THE FRENCH SOCIOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION - Paris, April 14-17, 2009

The French Sociological Association had its 3rd meeting in April at University Paris Diderot. The general topic of the meeting: violence and society was of special interest for sociology of law. The group of sociology of law and justice had 7 sessions. Many papers dealt with the question of law and violence either in a general point of view or in specific situations. Others papers dealt with legal profession, judiciary, justice transformation, judicialization. The field works are often international, including countries as indonesia, Russia, Columbia, Algeria, United States of America. Most of the participants were young scholars or PhD students, which is a very good sign for the discipline. The program of the group is still available on the website of the French sociological association:

PRESENTING THE RC SL WG FOR COMPARATIVE STUDIES FOR LEGAL PROFESSION

The Working Group for Comparative Studies of Legal Professions was established, more than twenty years ago, by Richard Abel and Philip Lewis, to carry out an international research project on lawyers – how they developed as a profession and how they control their markets. This research was published, at the end of the 1980s in the three volumes of Lawyers in Society. From the beginning, the WG was part of the Research Committee on Sociology of Law, a research committee of ISA (the International Sociological Association). It is involved in the activities of RC SL, especially in its bi-annual meeting. The successive Chairs of the WG have been: Terry Halliday, Bill Felstiner, Benoit Bastard and Emmanuel Lazega. The research topics covered by the WG are increasingly diverse: they include studies of other professions in a comparative perspective, such as the judiciary or notaries. The WG is divided in thematic sub-groups (see below their titles and the names of sub-group leaders). Sub-groups have their own agenda and have regular meetings, either within the WG meetings and RC SL congresses, or specific ad hoc meetings. WG meetings are devoted to the presentation and discussion of comparative research projects carried out by members. A great number of publications have come out of their activities, particularly collective books or special issues of journals.

The WG has more than 100 members who contribute effectively to its conferences and/or to sub-group activities. It holds a specific meeting every two years, in preferably in the south of Europe: for instance in Peyresq (2006) and Berder (2008).

WG members have to be members of the RC SL. They are scholars of different origins and affiliations – sociologists, law professors and lawyers interested in socio-legal studies, members of research centres within the legal field, etc. The WG welcomes new participants and will organize sessions on several issues related to the legal professions at the RC SL and L&S meetings.

ADAM PODGÓRECKI'S SCHOLARLY CONCEPTS - A REVIEW

The Polish Sociological Association and the Institute of Social Prevention and Rehabilitation of the University of Warsaw have published recently a volume entitled Adam Podgórecki's Scholarly Concepts (Idee naukowe Adama Podgóreckiego). The book is a result of a conference devoted to Podgórecki's accomplishments, which was held in Warsaw in September 2008, a decade after the scholar's demise. Edited by Jerzy Kwaśniewski and Jan Winczorek, the volume includes a broad spectrum of publications inspired by various aspects of Podgórecki's impressive achievements.

The tome opens with a description of archive records that the scholar left behind (drafted by Maria Winclawska and Włodzimierz Winclawski), and with a biographical note authored by Andrzej Kojder, reprinted from Encyclopaedia of Sociology. Next, Kojder presents the bases of Podgórecki's scholarly concepts, searching for Petrażycki-related notions. The influence that Petrażycki had on Podgórecki was so great that the latter was in the habit of calling himself "the grandson of Leon Petrażycki". He was not an uncritical one. However, the concepts of positive and intuitive law, legal and moral norms, and rational policy of law, put forward by Petrażycki, were in fact the starting point for Podgórecki's own ideas. These ideas, in turn, have provided the inspiration for contemporary scholars whose work is presented in the book. This offers an interesting opportunity to follow the concepts as they develop and evolve.

The consecutive articles in the book build on Podgórecki's ideas, either by taking them further or by arguing with them. Jerzy Mikułowski Pomorski and Wanda Kaczyńska both refer to the notion of intelligentsia and its ethos, the former by discussing the calling of the Polish intelligentsia as perceived by Podgórecki, and the latter by outlining the perception of Podgórecki's notions and reactions to his ideas on intelligentsia. Four articles – namely the ones by Jerzy Kwaśniewski, Joanna Zamecka, Kazimierz W. Frieske and Anna Szydłowska and Michał Klata – address the topic of social engineering across various contexts. These authors cite aspects of Podgórecki's writings, such as the notion of megasociology that was never fully developed (J. Kwaśniewski). However, they also present new ideas, inspired by Podgórecki, such as the use of the concept of aim-based action (postępowanie celowościowe) in designing drug-abuse prevention strategies in local communities (J. Zamecka). K. Frieske and A. Szydłowska and M. Klata write on the possibilities of employing Podgórecki's notions of social engineering in practice. Andrzej Zybertowicz interprets and develops Podgórecki's observations, and takes further his concepts of third-degree social control (which is to function alongside the recognised types of control – primary and secondary). Anna Kiersztyn in her article studies the issue of boundaries of social capital, while Jan Winczorek engages into a discussion with Podgórecki's notion of totalitarian and post-totalitarian law, pointing to a number of problems resulting from Podgórecki's "too strong assumption of the social role of law, and consequently the imposition of the theory of the totalitarianism versus post-totalitarianism". Janusz Mariański writes about a less famous aspect of Podgórecki's writing, namely his accomplishments in the area of sociology of morality, of which Mariański presents the scholar as both a researcher and a theoretician. Zbigniew Cywiński's text on Russian law, studying the issues of legal nihilism and social exclusion, closes the part of the book devoted to the various perspectives on Podgórecki's concepts. The remaining part of the volume consists of short texts commemorating the scholar, who died in Ottawa in 1998.

ISA SOCIOPIEDIA

The Research Committee on the Sociology of Law has been invited by International Sociological Association to participate in its new initiative: the creation of Sociopedia, an on-line collection of state of the art reviews of areas in the social sciences which will be edited by SAGE Publications.

"Sociopedia.ISA is a new concept of knowledge dissemination. It combines the best of two worlds: the opportunities the Internet offers and the scientific quality guaranteed by solid and imaginative editing. While experienced editors make sure that the highest possible quality is offered, the Internet makes it possible to always provide the most recent state of the art. Sociopedia.ISA reflects and offers 'a living social science. (...) Entries will be included upon an editorial decision based on peer reviews."

Reza Banakar has accepted the task of writing the entry about the field of sociology of law.
