ISSA 2015 WORLD CONGRESS OF SOCIOLOGY OF SPORT

In June 2015, the International Sociology of Sport Association (ISSA) will celebrate its 50th anniversary. Paris Descartes, Sorbonne Paris Cité university's "Techniques et Enjeux du Corps" (EA 3625) team has the honour of organising this ISSA congress, which will have as its theme The Sociological Lens and the Wellbeing of Sport, between the 9th and the 12th of June.

This congress' aim is two fold: first of all, to gather together sociologists of sport around the notion of wellbeing in order to exchange new thoughts and share work in this field. The congress will allow common interests linked to this theme to emerge, teams from different countries to put in place research projects, and international scientific knowledge in human and social sciences to spread. Moreover, the ISSA's 50th anniversary will be the occasion to encourage a dialogue about the sociology of sport's dynamism for the past 50 years. This congress is organised with the support of the Maison des Sciences de l'Homme Paris-Nord, the Caisse Nationale de Solidarité pour l'Autonomie, the Institut National Supérieur de formation et de recherche pour l'Education des jeunes Handicapés et les Enseignements Adaptés (INS HEA) and its Grhapes research team (EA 7287), the Paris Descartes IUT's social communication lab as well as the Université de Lausanne, among others.

OTHER CONFERENCES

Pan Pacific Masters Games International Sports Science Symposium

Masters athlete researchers Peter Reaburn from CQUniversity, Mike Climstein from Bond University, Dr Rylee Dionigi from Charles Sturt University, together with Confederation of Australian Sport CEO and President, Rob Bradley, are jointly hosting the First Pan Pacific Masters Games International Sports Science Symposium in conjunction with the Pan Pacific Masters Games on Queensland's Gold Coast. The two-day symposium takes place at Bond University on the Gold Coast (Day 1 – Thursday 30th October 2014) and the Games Village at the Gold Coast Convention Centre (Day 2 – Friday 31st October 2014).

The aim of the symposium is to bring the science of sport to masters sport. World class researchers in the area of masters sport who are also internationally-recognised presenters and educators will be bridging the gap between the science of masters sport and masters athletes, coaches, medical and allied health professionals, and sport administrators looking to increase membership at club, regional, state and national level.

The two-day symposium is the first symposium we know of that focuses on the science of sport as it relates to masters athletes. While there is plenty of science for younger athletes, this symposium brings the science of masters sport in two streams. A Sport Performance Stream hosted by Peter Reaburn and his former PhD student, Professor Aaron Coutts, a world leader in team sport performance; and a Sport for All Stream hosted by Dr Rylee Dionigi and Rob Bradley.

Discounts are available for early bird registrations (before 13/10/14) as well as Sports Medicine Australia (SMA) and Exercise and Sports Science Australia (ESSA) members and undergraduate and postgraduate students.

Learn from the best. The program has not only presentations but also panel discussions where presenters and elite masters athletes from diverse backgrounds will be on stage to engage with symposium participants wanting answers to those questions you always wanted to ask.

PSA Sport and Politics Group
9th Annual Conference

SPORT, POLITICS and SOCIAL POLICY

7- 8 January 2015, Durham University, England.

Sport, as a cultural phenomenon, shapes politics, drives economies, highlights inequalities and contributes to our sense of identity and to our local and national pride.

Governments and international sports federations bid to host sports mega-events amidst allegations of corrupt practices, yet not all citizens want public money invested in sport at the expense of other services. Rising levels of obesity and inactive lifestyles make sports participation a major concern for current government policy.

The use of sport in initiatives such as crime prevention, community development and health promotion campaigns also make sport a subject area of great relevance and political interest, particularly in the area of social policy.

The Sport, Politics and Social Policy Conference 2015 will provide a wide-ranging and interdisciplinary examination of these issues and more. The conference aims to explore the inter-relationship between sport*, politics and social policy by drawing on research from a variety of academic fields, including: politics, international relations, sociology, social policy, criminology, community and youth work, history, law, geography, and sport studies.

*We recognise sports in their broadest forms, including: elite/high performance, competitive, recreational, community, disability and lifestyle sports.

We welcome Abstracts of up to 300 words for papers that address – but are not limited to - the following themes:

- Sport and social policy
- Sports policy and sports development
- Sport and identity politics (e.g. issues of gender and sexuality, race and ethnicity, disability)
- Sport, international development and relations
- Sport and global, international and local communities
- Sports governance and the regulation of sport
- Sport and crime
- Sport, religion and sectarianism
- Sports mega events and politics
- Sport, resistance and social justice
- Sport, obesity and public health policy
- Teaching sport and politics / sport and policy

Please email Abstracts (300 words maximum) to: sport&politicsconference@dur.ac.uk by 31st October 2014.

Registration: <https://www.dur.ac.uk/conference.booking/details/?id=379>

NB: We welcome submissions from international colleagues and also from postgraduate research students.
