The West and the Rest

When the social sciences were constructed in the nineteenth century, it was originally a set of practices located in a few countries, primarily five: Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, and the United States. It was natural that the emerging disciplines - in particular, history, economics, political science, and sociology - were primarily concerned with the empirical reality of these five countries, and more largely of the "West." It was the presumed intellectual problematic of "modernity" that was the underlying object of intellectual enquiry in the social sciences: what it was, what social "problems" it caused, how we might understand better its evolution.

At the same time, social scientists were aware that the "West" was not the totality of the world. However, in the nineteenth century they also believed that the non-West was non-modern, and therefore fundamentally different from the West. The question consequently that was posed was both why to study the non-West and how to study the non-West. In a sense, the basic answer to why the "West" should study the "rest" was in order to delineate how they were different from the West, in what way they were non-"modern," and therefore in what way the "West" was modern. The answer to how to study the non-West was twofold. On the one hand, special disciplines were established to study the non-West: anthropology for the study of so-called primitive peoples, and Oriental studies for the study of the so-called high civilizations (China, India, the Arab world, etc.). In addition, however, social scientists, primarily sociologists, created concepts that defined the essential difference between the West and the rest in terms of sets of antinomies: status and contract (Maine), military and industrial society (Spencer), mechanical and organic solidarity (Durkheim), traditional and rational-legal legitimization (Weber), the pattern variables of Parsons.

The transformation of the world since 1945 undermined the social basis of these nineteenth-century constructs. The spread of social science to all corners of the earth, and more importantly, the political reassertion of the non-Western world, raised fundamental questions about the distinction between the West and the rest. It undid the logic of having separate disciplines to concern themselves with different parts of the world. Today U.S. sociologists and historians study Sri Lanka, and Sri Lankan anthropologists study the United States. We can all multiply the examples.

But even more importantly, questions have been raised about the antinomies, and how well they define the modern. There are some today who believe that we have all moved beyond modernity, to a new terrain called post-modernity. There are others who believe that the "modern" doesn't really exist at all, in the sense that the presumed changes that the "modern West" introduced were not all that different from continuing patterns in the rest of the world. In particular, some point to the rise of East Asia in recent years as simply the return to centrality of East Asia in the world, after a brief (and, it is argued, ultimately minor) interlude of European assertiveness.

It is not that there are not among us still some passionate defenders of the validity of the distinction between the West and the rest. It is simply that this distinction can no longer be stated as a truism, but must be defended as a controversial intellectual position. Of course, to pose it as a question of the "West" and the "rest" is itself to utilize a language derived from the geopolitical dominance of the West. This dominance, which seemed to be so self-evident in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, came to be challenged vigorously in this second half of the twentieth century, and may well become a rapidly diminishing reality in the twenty-first century.

But even if, as a result of the declining position of the Western world, Eurocentrism were to die out as an intellectual force, it might of course merely come to be replaced by other "centrisms" Japanocentrism, or Sinocentrism, for example. We do not yet know. Nonetheless, the intellectual issues would not change simply because the geographical locus of the center changed. For the fundamental intellectual issue is the relationship of the universal and the particular in social science analysis.

There is a sense in which all knowledge activity is a search for universals, for explanations that interpret empirical reality, which has to mean that one is explaining the perceived reality in terms of something else. This something else has to be an aspiring universal. But there is another sense in which all knowledge activity is particularistic, since this activity is conducted by individuals and groups who are socially generated, and socially anchored, however far their particular anchors permit them to roam. No universalizing knowledge activity can ever fully achieve a universalist stance. No particularizing knowledge activity can ever escape making claims that take the form of at least mini-grand narratives.

The way we have dealt with this dilemma for the past 150-200 years has been, on the whole, to choose sides, to prefer the one orientation or the other, to be nomothetic or idiographic, to have one social science for humanity or to have two (one for the West and one for the rest). What perhaps we may able to see more clearly today is that we cannot really choose between the universal and the particular, any more than we can choose between the structural and the historical. We are condemned to analyzing everything in its contradiction as simultaneously an expression of the universal and representative of the irremediably particular, as having both a structure which is describable and hence fixed, and having a history such that the structure is always immediately different from what it was the instant before.

The problem before social science today is to evolve a methodology that is consonant with this inability to choose, and to assume collectively the burden of constructing a pluralistic universalism. The fact that this seems incredibly difficult, and full of large logical traps, is no excuse for not proceeding down this path, since I believe this is the only path that exists in the dark forest in which we find ourselves intellectually. The West and the rest? the East and the West? the North and the South? Yes, of course, and no, of course not.

L'occident et les autres

Quand les sciences sociales ont été élaborées au cours du dix-neuvième siècle, il s'agissait à l'origine d'un ensemble de pratiques situées dans quelques pays, cinq notamment: le Royaume Uni, la France, l'Allemagne, l'Italie et les Etats-Unis. Il allait de soi que les disciplines émergentes - en particulier, l'histoire, l'économie, la science politique et la sociologie - s'occupèrent principalement de la réalité empirique de ces cinq pays et plus généralement de celle de "l'occident". C'était en fait la problématique intellectuelle de la "modernité" qui était l'objet sous-jacent du questionnement intellectuel dans les sciences sociales: ce qu'elle était, quels étaient les "problèmes" sociaux qu'elle provoquait et comment nous pouvions mieux comprendre son évolution.

En même temps, les scientifiques sociaux étaient conscients que "l'occident" ne représentait pas l'ensemble du monde. Cependant, au dix-neuvième siècle, ils croyaient aussi que le non-occident était non-moderne, et par conséquent fondamentalement différent de l'occident. La question qui s'ensuivait était à la fois pourquoi étudier le non-occident et comment étudier le non-occident. D'une certaine manière, la réponse à pourquoi "l'occident" devait étudier "les autres" servit à définir à quel point ils étaient différents de l'occident, dans quelle mesure ils étaient non-"modernes" et en conséquence comment "l'occident" était moderne. La réponse à comment étudier le non-occident fut double. D'une part, on créa des disciplines spéciales pour étudier le non-occident: l'anthropologie pour l'étude des soi-disant peuples primitifs, et les études orientales pour l'étude des soi-disant grandes civilisations (la Chine, l'Inde, le monde arabe, etc.). D'autre part, cependant, les scientifiques sociaux, principalement les sociologues, créèrent des concepts qui définissaient les différences essentielles entre l'occident et les autres en termes de groupes d'antinomies: statut et contrat (Maine), société militaire et société industrielle (Spencer), solidarité mécanique et solidarité organique (Durkheim), légitimation traditionnelle et légitimation juridictionnelle-rationnelle (Weber), les "patterns" variables de Parsons.

La transformation du monde depuis 1945 a ébranlé les bases sociales de ces constructions intellectuelles du dix-neuvième siècle. La diffusion de la science sociale aux quatre coins de la terre et, surtout, la réaffirmation politique du monde non-occidental, ont soulevé des questions fondamentales au sujet de la distinction entre l'occident et les autres. Ces phénomènes contredisaient la logique de l'existence de disciplines séparées appliquées à différentes parties du monde. De nos jours, les sociologues et historiens des Etats-Unis étudient le Sri Lanka et les anthropologues du Sri Lanka étudient les Etats-Unis. Et on pourrait multiplier les exemples.

Mais plus importantes encore, des questions ont surgi à propos des antinomies et de leur capacité à définir convenablement le moderne. Actuellement, certains pensent que nous avons dépassé la modernité pour rejoindre un nouveau terrain dénommé post-modernité. D'autres pensent au contraire que le "moderne" n'existe pas du tout, en ce sens que les prétendus changements introduits à l'origine par "l'occident moderne" n'étaient pas tous si différents des modèles existants dans le reste du monde. Par exemple, la montée de l'Asie de l'Est au cours de ces dernières années s'interprète simplement comme le retour de l'Asie de l'Est à une position centrale dans le monde, après un bref (et dit-on, finalement mineur) intervalle de protagonisme européen.

Ce n'est pas qu'il n'existe plus parmi nous des défenseurs passionnés de la validité de la distinction entre l'occident et les autres. C'est simplement que cette distinction ne peut plus être considérée comme un truisme, mais qu'elle doit être défendue comme position intellectuelle controversée. Bien sûr, en faire une question de l'occident et les autres revient à utiliser un langage dérivé de la prédominance géopolitique de l'occident. Cette prédominance, qui semblait si évidente au dix-neuvième siècle et au début du vingtième, a fini par être sérieusement défiée dans la deuxième moitié du vingtième siècle et peut parfaitement devenir une réalité décroissante au cours du vingt et unième siècle.

Mais même si l'eurocentrisme devait disparaître en tant que force intellectuelle à la suite du déclin du monde occidental, il pourrait bien sûr être simplement remplacé par d'autres "centrismes", par exemple, le japonocentrisme ou le sinocentrisme. Nous n'en savons encore rien. Néanmoins, les débats intellectuels ne changeront pas simplement à cause d'un changement de localisation géographique du centre. Car le problème intellectuel fondamental reste la relation entre l'universel et le particulier dans les sciences sociales.

Il existe un niveau où toute activité cognitive est une recherche d'universaux, d'explications qui interprètent la réalité empirique, ce qui revient à dire qu'on explique la réalité perçue en termes de quelque chose d'autre. Ce quelque chose d'autre doit être un universel auquel on doit aspirer. Mais il existe un autre niveau où toute activité cognitive est particulariste, du moment où cette activité est conduite par des individus ou des groupes qui ont des origines sociales et des attaches sociales, et ceci aussi loin que leurs attaches personnelles leur permettent de dériver. Aucune activité cognitive universalisatrice ne peut jamais atteindre pleinement une position universaliste. Aucune activité cognitive particularisatrice ne peut jamais s'empêcher de faire des revendications sous la forme de mini-grands récits.

La manière dont nous avons affronté ce dilemme au cours des derniers 150-200 ans a consisté, dans l'ensemble, à prendre parti à préférer une orientation plutôt qu'une autre, à être nomothétique ou idiographique, à avoir une seule science sociale pour toute l'humanité ou à en avoir deux (une pour l'occident et une pour les autres). Ce que nous pouvons voir plus clairement aujourd'hui est que nous ne pouvons pas vraiment choisir entre l'universel et le particulier, de la même manière que nous ne pouvons pas non plus choisir entre le structurel et l'historique. Nous sommes réduits à analyser toute chose dans sa contradiction comme étant à la fois une expression de l'universel et une représentation de l'irréversible particulier, les deux ayant une structure qui peut être décrite et donc fixée et une histoire qui fait que la structure est immédiatement différente de ce qu'elle était l'instant avant.

Le problème auquel est confrontée la science sociale aujourd'hui est de développer une méthodologie qui soit en accord avec cette incapacité de choisir et qui assume collectivement la charge de bâtir un universalisme pluraliste. Le fait que ceci semble extrêmement difficile et rempli de grands pièges logiques n'est pas une excuse pour ne pas poursuivre dans cette voie, car je crois que c'est la seule voie qui existe dans la sombre forêt où nous nous trouvons d'un point de vue intellectuel. L'occident et les autres? L'orient et l'occident? Le Nord et le Sud? Oui, bien sûr, et non, bien sûr que non. (Traduit par Jordi Vidal)

El Occidente y los otros

Cuando las ciencias sociales fueron construidas en el siglo diecinueve, eran originalmente una serie de prácticas localizadas en unos pocos países, básicamente cinco: Gran Bretaña, Francia, Alemania, Italia y los Estados Unidos. Era lógico que las disciplinas emergentes - en particular, historia, economía, ciencia política y sociología - tuvieran que ver, principalmente, con la realidad empírica de estos cinco países, y, más extensamente, con el "Occidente". La supuesta problemática intelectual de la "modernidad" fue un objeto fundamental de la investigación intelectual de las ciencias sociales: qué era, qué "problemas" sociales causaba, cómo podríamos entender mejor su evolución.

Al mismo tiempo, los científicos sociales fueron conscientes de que el "Occidente" no era la totalidad del mundo. Sin embargo, en el siglo diecinueve creían que el no-Occidente era no-moderno, y, por lo tanto, fundamentalmente distinto del Occidente. La pregunta que, consecuentemente, fue planteada era tanto el porqué cuanto el cómo estudiar el no-Occidente. En algún sentido, la respuesta básica a porqué el "Occidente" debe estudiar a los "otros" fue para definir sus diferencias con Occidente, y de qué forma eran no-"modernos", y por eso de qué manera el "Occidente" era moderno. La respuesta a cómo estudiar el no-Occidente fue doble. Por un lado, fueron establecidas unas disciplinas especiales para estudiar el no-Occidente: la antropología para estudiar los así llamados pueblos primitivos, y los estudios orientales para investigar las así llamadas grandes civilizaciones (China, India, el mundo árabe, etc.). Adicionalmente, sin embargo, los científicos sociales, principalmente sociólogos, crearon conceptos que definían la diferencia esencial entre el Occidente y los otros en términos de una serie de antinomias: status y contrato (Maine), sociedad militar e industrial (Spencer), solidaridad mecánica y orgánica (Durkheim), legitimación tradicional y racional-legal (Weber), los patrones variables de Parsons.

La transformación del mundo desde 1945 minó las bases sociales de estas construcciones del siglo diecinueve. La extensión de las ciencias sociales a todos los rincones de la tierra, y lo más importante, la reafirmación política del mundo no-Occidental, plantearon preguntas fundamentales sobre la distinción entre el Occidente y los otros. Deshizo la lógica de tener disciplinas separadas dedicadas a diferentes partes del mundo. Hoy sociólogos e historiadores de Estados Unidos estudian Sri Lanka y antropólogos de Sri Lanka estudian los Estados Unidos. Todos podemos multiplicar los ejemplos.

Pero aún más importante: las preguntas fueron planteadas sobre las antinomias, y con qué exactitud definen lo moderno. Hoy algunos creen que todos hemos pasado ya más allá de la modernidad, hacia el nuevo terreno llamado pos-modernidad. Hay otros que creen que lo "moderno" no existe realmente, en el sentido de que los presuntos cambios que el "Occidente moderno" introdujo no fueron tan diferentes de los patrones existentes en el resto del mundo. En particular, algunos destacan el ascenso del Lejano Oriente en los últimos años simplemente como su retorno a una posición central en el mundo, después de un breve (y, se argumenta, de menor importancia) interludio de autoafirmación europea.

Todavía quedan entre nosotros algunos defensores apasionados de la validez de la distinción entre el Occidente y el resto del mundo. Pero esta distinción no puede ser considerada por más tiempo como un dogma, y tiene que ser defendida como una postura intelectual controvertida. Obviamente, al plantear el problema del "Occidente" y el "resto del mundo" se utiliza el lenguaje derivado de la dominación geopolítica del Occidente. Esta dominación, que parecía ser tan evidente por si misma en los siglos diecinueve y veinte, ha llegado a ser vigorosamente desafiada en esta segunda mitad del siglo veinte, y puede llegar a disminuir rápidamente en el siglo veintiuno.

Pero incluso si, como resultado de la posición declinante del mundo occidental, el eurocentrismo desapareciese como fuerza intelectual, podría por supuesto llegar a ser reemplazado por otros "centrismos": nipocentrismo, chinocentrismo, por ejemplo. Todavía no lo sabemos. Sin embargo, los problemas intelectuales no cambian porque cambie el lugar geográfico del centro. Porque el problema intelectual básico es la relación entre lo universal y lo particular en el análisis de las ciencias sociales.

Hay una percepción de que la actividad intelectual es una búsqueda de lo universal, de explicaciones que interpreten la realidad empírica, lo que quiere decir que uno está explicando la realidad percibida en términos de algo más. Este algo más tiene que ser una aspiración a lo universal. Pero hay otra percepción de que la actividad intelectual es particularista, porque esta actividad es desarrollada por personas y grupos que están socialmente condicionados, y socialmente anclados, no importa hasta qué punto sus particulares anclajes les permiten deambular. Una actividad intelectual que universalice jamás puede llegar a conseguir plenamente una postura universalista. Una actividad intelectual que particularice jamás puede evitar las reclamaciones de que adopta una forma de, al menos, pequeña-gran narración.

La forma en la que hemos tratado este dilema durante los últimos 150-200 años ha sido, en general, elegir posiciones, preferir una orientación a otra, ser nomotético o idiográfico, tener una única ciencia social para toda la humanidad o tener dos (una para el Occidente y otra para el resto del mundo). Lo que quizás podemos ver con más claridad hoy es que realmente no podemos elegir entre lo universal y lo particular, igual que no podemos elegir entre lo estructural y lo histórico. Estamos condenados a analizar todo en su contradicción, siendo simultáneamente una expresión de lo universal y una representación de lo irremediablemente particular, teniendo ambas una estructura descriptible y por tanto fija, y teniendo una historia tal que la estructura es siempre inmediatamente diferente de lo que fue un momento antes. El problema de las ciencias sociales de hoy es desarrollar una metodología que sea consonante con su incapacidad para elegir, y asumir colectivamente el peso de la construcción de un universalismo pluralista. El hecho de que esto parezca increíblemente difícil, y lleno de grandes trampas lógicas, no es excusa para no seguir este camino, porque creo que es el único camino que existe en el oscuro bosque en el que nos encontramos intelectualmente. ¿El Occidente y los "otros"? ¿El Este y el Oeste? ¿El Norte y el Sur? Si, por supuesto, y no, por supuesto no. (Traducido por José I. Reguera e Izabela Barlinska).

ISA Ethical Guidelines

ISA Executive Committee has been approached by Walter Korpi and Joakim Palme (Sweden) to establish ethical guidelines for the use of researcher-established databases. The following Statement was adopted by the Executive Committee at its annual meeting held in November 1996:

Databases should not be regarded as being in the public domain until the researchers who have assembled them have specified the sources of their data and the methods by which they were constructed. Information about sources and methods should be made available within a reasonable time. Interim data sets should be available for inspection of their accuracy by other scholars.

This request led to a wider discussion on whether the ISA should elaborate an international code of ethics and what issues should be covered. Please send your opinion to the ISA Secretariat in Madrid by August 1, 1997. A sub-committee composed of ISA Executive Committee members: Linda Christiansen-Ruffman, Juan Díez-Nicolás, Vincenzo Ferrari (Chair), and Göran Therborn, will prepare a report to be discussed at the 1997 Executive Committee meeting.

ISA XIV World Congress of Sociology July 26 - August 1, 1998, Montréal, Canada

Welcome from the Canadian Congress Organising Committee

by Gilles Pronovost
The President of the Local Organising Committee

Dear ISA Members,

On the behalf of the Canadian Sociology and Anthropology Association and the Association canadienne des sociologues et anthropologues de langue française, and on the behalf of the Local Organising Committee, I am pleased to invite you to the XIVth World Congress of Sociology, which will be held in Montréal, from July 26 to August 1, 1998. This congress will mark the 50th anniversary of the ISA, which adds a particular and significant historical character to it.

The venue of Montréal as host of the World Congress of Sociology reflects the vitality of the Québec and Canadian sociology. Associations have a membership far beyond the ratio of many other countries, they hold regular meetings and publish regular Newsletters. The many departments of sociology offer university programs at all levels. The sociological journals have world-wide diffusion. Many researchers are active in international organisations. There are four universities and multiple research centres, private and public in Montreal, which is also renowned for the quality and the diversity of its cultural activities, have various museums and hold international festivals.

We are proud to have the opportunity to welcome this World Congress. We put every energy to make this event an unforgettable one.

Please read carefully the Registration brochure for every detail regarding registration, lodging, cultural activities, day care etc. The deadlines must be strictly met.

I look forward to welcoming you in Montréal in the Summer of 1998. Please accept, dear colleagues, my best wishes.

Preliminary Program for RC 03 Sessions. Members interested in presenting a paper should contact sessions chairs listed below.

Session 1: Transformations in Urban Leadership: the New Political Culture

Co-Chairs: •Terry Nichols CLARK (Univ Chicago, 1126 E. 59th, Suite 322, Chicago, IL 60637, USA, tel: 1-312-702-8686, fax: 1-312-702-8686, email: tnc@cicero.spc.uchicago), •Vincent HOFFMANN-MARTINOT (Centre d'Etude et de Recherche sur la vie locale, Institute d'Eudes politiques de Bordeaux, Domaine Universitaire, 33405 Talence BP 101, France, tel: 33-56-844252 (fax: 33-56-374537), email: Vhm@frbdx11.cribx1.u-bordeaux.fr)

The New Political Culture emerged as effort to capture some key reasons behind major innovations in local government. These often came with a new mayor and council, who sometimes effected small revolutions. From ECPR meetings in Amsterdam, Limerick, and Leiden, comparisons across nations helped us sharpen specifics. Draft papers from the Madrid World Congress onward, and a special conference in Paris, led Terry Clark and Vincent Hoffmann-Martinot to assume editorship, and Ronald Inglehart to join us in an introduction to the book, The New Political Culture. We have analysed FAUI data for several years as summarized in papers in this session. Yet we developed so many strong candidates for papers, including student papers at the University of Chicago, that Mike Rempel and Terry Clark are editing a book of analyses of citizen survey data, The Politics of Post-Industrial Society. Harald Baldersheim and his associates have used organizational culture to organize many administrative changes in local government. "Reinventing government" and similar labels are applications of similar concerns. Controversies over these issues have emerged, as variations on these and other interpretations have been presented. This session provides a forum to assess what we have learned and where to go next.

Session 2. Social Movements, Community Power and Urban Innovation in the Iberian Countries and Latin America.

Co-Chairs: •Harald FUHR and •Tim CAMPBELL (World Bank, Washington, DC, USA, email: hfuhr@worldbank.org), •Martha LANDA (Cacheuta 3669 Bo. Residencial V. Sarsfield, 5016 Cordoba, Argentina, tel: 54-51-69031 fax: 54-51-241302), •Lourdes LOPEZ NIETO (UNED, Fac Ciencias Politicas y Sociologia, Senda del Rey s/n, 28040 Madrid, Spain, tel: 34-1-3987003, fax: 34-1-3987003)

The World Bank has sponsored a substantial project on these themes for several years that has led to case studies in large cities across Latin America. These rich reports of specifics contrast with the more quantitative work by many others. Martha Landa organized a session in Spanish in Madrid that was highly successful. She was joined by others for this one. Her own FAUI work in Argentina has now been through two waves of data collection, from which she continues to publish papers. Her presentation at the Tampere meeting in Summer 1993 made the Scandinavians pay attention to the dramatic differences in Latin countries. Lourdes Nieto is conducting new urban studies in Spain. Papers may be in English or Spanish.

Session 3. The Progressive City: How Do Localities Support Poor-oriented Activities?

Co-Chairs: •Dan CHEKKI (515 Portage Ave, Univ Winnipeg, Winnipeg, Canada R3B 2E9), •Sophie BODY-GENDROT (FNSP, 27 rue St Guillaume, 75337 Paris Cedex 7, France, •Dominique JOYE (IREC-DAEPFL, Case postale 555, 1001 Lausanne, tel: 41-21-6933409, fax: 41-21-6933840, email: dj@dasun1.epfl.ch), •Anton M. J. KREUKELS (Univ Utrecht, Inst Regional Planning, Heidelberglaan 2, 3584 CS Utrecht, The Netherlands)

Dan Chekki has served as Secretary of RC03 for several years and brought attention to concerns of the disadvantaged, and progressive policy solutions that some cities have found. Sophie Body-Genderot and Dominique Joye have similarly been synthesizing lessons from cities that others can learn from. Anton Kruekels has been an influential national urban policy advisor on these issues in the Netherlands, and completed two national reports and two waves of FAUI surveys with Tejo Spit.

Session 4: Urban Canada: Traditional and Emerging Patterns

Co-Chairs. •James LIGHTBODY (Dept Political Science, Univ Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta, Canada T6G 2H4, tel: 1-403-4923555, fax: 1-403-4922586), •Jacques LEVILLE (Dept Science Politique, UQAM, 1255 St. Dennis, Montréal, QUE H3C 3P8, Canada , tel: 1-514-9874590)

Canada offers many international lessons if we ask the right questions and look carefully at similarities and differences from other countries. Jim Lightbody and Jacques Levile are leading observers of Canadian cities. They may add more specific themes as the program starts to take shape. We hope too to find ways to meet with some local officials in Montreal, and perhaps have some sort of tour.

Session 5: The Politics of Urban Transitions: Post-communist Regimes in Comparative Perspective.

Co-Chairs: •Harald BALDERSHEIM (Dept Political Sciences, Univ Oslo, Box 1097 Blindern, 0317 Oslo, Norway, tel: 47-22857189, fax: 47-228544, email: Harald.Baldersheim@stv.uio.no), •Michael ILLNER (Inst Sociology, Czech Academy Sciences, Jilská 1, 110 00 Prague 1; Czech Republic, tel: 42-2-24220256, fax: 42-2-24220278, email: illner@earn.cvvt.cz)

Post-Communist Regimes in Comparative Perspective illustrates a major achievement joining East and West. After a Warsaw conference in 1989, the East Europeans expressed interest in working with us more seriously. Harald Baldersheim and Michael Illner led many focused sessions and conferences, that led to two books of case studies of the transition to democracy in individual cities and towns, then national surveys of city leaders, and citizen surveys (see summaries in past FAUI Newsletters). Several country reports have been published in Hungarian and Polish, and a major book is just out in English, H. Baldersheim, Michael Illner and others, Local Democracy... (Westview 1996).

Session 6: New Urban Politics: How are Local Parties Changing?

Co-Chairs: •Martin SAIZ (Dept Political Science, Notre Dame Univ, South Bend, IN, USA; tel: 1-219-631-8209, email: martin.r.saiz.1@nd.edu), •Hans GESER (Inst Sociology, Univ Zuerich, Raemistrasse 69, 8001 Zuerich, Switzerland, tel: 41-1-2572145, fax: 41-1-2521054)

Local Parties Past FAUI and ISA meetings have generated many papers concerning parties. Hans Geser has some particularly dramatic results from a massive survey of Swiss parties, and joined Martin Saiz as coeditor of a book on local parties. Some papers for this session are candidates for their volume.

Session 7: The New Community Power.

Co-Chairs: •Michael GOLDSMITH (Dept Politics and Contemporary History, Salford Univ, Salford M5 4WT, UK), •Richard HULA (Dept Political Science, Michigan State Univ, East Lansing, MI 48824-1032, USA, tel: 1-517-3362047, fax: 1-517-3361091).

The New Community Power emerges from Mike Goldsmith and Rich Hula's continuing work on leadership and power. Rich Hula and Clarence Stone have a new study of US cities and how their leaders are searching for innovative solutions. Mike Goldsmith has himself been a major source of innovation in British urban policy work for over a decade, and may offer some new perspectives from the major British urban study that he participates in with Gerry Stoker.

Session 8: Urban Economic Development: What Works, Where and Why? Shifting Paradigms to Encompass Amenities, Small vs. Large Firms, and Appropriate Incentives.

Chair: •Norman WALZER (Dept Economics, Western Illinois Univ, Macomb, IL 61455, USA, tel: 1-309-2981031, fax: 1-309-2982142) Norman Walzer launched this subproject at the Neuchatel, Switzerland conference in 1993, where Claude Jeanrenaud helped us assemble three working groups that each are leading to separate books or special journal issues. He has spearheaded urban development work over several years, and edited a book that grew out of the Neuchatel and Bielefeld conferences, Local Economic Development (Westview 1996). Much new has emerged since that we hope to include.

Session 9: Urban Government Growth and Retrenchment.

Co-Chairs: •George BOYNE (email: SBSGAB@cardiff.ac.uk), •Keith HOGGART (Dept Geography, King's College London, Strand, London WC2R 2LS, UK, tel: 44-171-873-2713, fax: 44-171-873-2287, email: keith.hoggart@kcl.ac.uk), •Dieter DETTKE (Friedrich Ebert Stiftung, Washington, DC; email: FESDC@aol.com)

Government Growth and Retrenchment was a second Neuchatel working group, and a book in progress. Oscar Gabriel and his Stuttgart team completed several very creative papers and a major work in German that we hope to bring to more general attention. The specific role of political parties is a major focus of our growth of government book, which has been thoughtfully analysed by George Boyne and Keith Hoggart in work to date especially on Britain. These issues have been at the core of many political party discussions, particularly such left parties rethink their concern for central planning and national government leadership? The French Socialists under Mitterand, and British Labour Party under Tony Blair have moved this way. The German SPD has been more cautious, but Dieter Dettke and others from the SPD have sponsored discussions and debates that we hope to continue here.

Session 10: Globalization and Urban Processes.

Co-Chairs: •Alan HARDING (European Inst Urban Affairs, Liverpool John Moores Univ, 51 Rodney St, Liverpool L1 9AT, UK, email: A.P.HARDING@livjm.ac.uk), •Joseph YI (Dept Political Science, Univ Chicago, Pick Hall, Chicago, IL 60637, USA, email: josephyi@midway.uchicago.edu), •Dele OLOWU (Dept Public Administration, Univ Ife, Ile-Ife, Nigeria).

Globalization and Urban Processes Globalization is widely recognized as a critical force transforming urban processes, but just it operates remains murky. How to identify and assess governmental processes that may affect the private sector processes are critical research and policy concerns for the years to come. Alan Harding has undertaken thoughtful case studies of politically progressive cities in Northern Europe and identified some important parallels and differences among them, as well as contrasts with North American cities. Harald Baldersheim has undertaken surveys of Norwegian and Finnish cities about their international coordination efforts.

Session 11: Gender and the City

Co-Chairs: •Lynn APPLETON (Dept Sociology, Florida Atlantic Univ, 500 N.20th St., Boca Raton, FL 33432, USA), •Susan CLARKE (Dept Political Science, Univ Colorado, Boulder, CO 80302, USA, tel: 1-407-3673278, fax: 1-303-492-2953), •Gerda R. WEKERLE (Fac Environmental Studies, York Univ, 4700 Keele Street, North York, ONT M3J 1P3, Canada, tel: 1-416-7362100 ext. 22636, fax: 1416-7365679, email: gwekerle@yorku.ca).

Gender and the City emerges from the successful session in Bielefeld led by Susan Clarke, Lynn Appleton and Gerda Wekerle. They suggested another session on gender and the city; new work has been undertaken on gender in many countries that we may learn about here.

Session 12: Roundtable: Planning for Future International Urban Research Building on Past Surveys of the Fiscal Austerity and Urban Innovation Project

Co-Chairs: •Terry Nichols CLARK (Univ Chicago, 1126 E. 59th, Suite 322, Chicago, IL 60637, USA, tel: 1-312-702-8686, fax: 1-312-702-8686, email: tnc@cicero.spc.uchicago), •Harald BALDERSHEIM (Dept Political Sciences, Univ Oslo, Box 1097 Blindern, 0317 Oslo, Norway, tel: 47-22857189, fax: 47-228544, email: Harald.Baldersheim@stv.uio.no)

This Roundtable session will provide a forum for active urban researchers to review major national urban studies in progress. Several national teams have been adding items and repeating versions of past surveys that provide pretests for larger-scale international collaboration. We can alert one another to major future data collection efforts; air recommendations of items from past urban surveys (especially of the Fiscal Austerity and Urban Innovation Project and Local Democracy and Innovation Project in Eastern Europe) that deserve repetition due to interesting results, especially striking cross-national differences that have emerged; offer and solicit suggestions for new items that have been illuminating in other urban studies. Future International Urban Research is a Roundtable to discuss future work that we may pursue together, via common surveys, Ph.D. student exchanges, summer schools, data sharing, and more. Most participants are both national and international leaders in these activities. We look forward to exchanging ideas.

Tentative Participants: Poul-Erik MOURITZEN (Denmark), Norman WALZER (USA), Vincent HOFFMANN-MARTINOT (France), Michael GOLDSMITH (UK), P.O. NORELL (Sweden), Michael ILLNER (Czech Republic), Pawel SWIANIEWICZ (Poland), Martha LANDA (Argentina), Hans GESER (Switzerland), Johan ACKAERT (Belgium).

RC08 History of Sociology

Planned sessions and organizers (the detailed time table of RC08 sessions will be worked out later; the order in which they are listed below has no significance):

1. Construction of sociological knowledge in the colonial setting.

This session will consider the history of sociology's encounter with colonial societies. Subjects such as the role of metropolitan research institutions, local centres of research, the role of indigenous knowledge, the origins of concepts and theories used to discuss colonial societies are some of the themes to be considered.

Organisers: •Frank FUREDI, Kynes College, The University, Canterbury, Kent CT2 7NP, UK, email: ff2@ukc.ac.uk

•Lyn SCHUMAKER, Wellcome Unit, Maths Tower, Univ Manchester, Manchester M13 9PL, UK

2. In search of a 'good society': the concept of sociology as a 'moral science' in the history of sociology.

The different courses of the concept of sociology as a scholarly enterprise to formulate scientific designs for the 'good society' in different national traditions; the historical processes of the 'scientific turn' after which even the idea of sociology as a 'moral science' was banned as unscientific; where does sociology stand in this discussion as we approach the 21st century?

Organisers: •Dirk KAESLER, Inst Sociology, Univ Marburg, Am Gruen 1, 35037 Marburg, Germany, email: kaesler@nws.fb03.uni-marburg.de

•Maarten MENTZEL, Johan de Wittstraat 38, 2334 AR Leiden, The Netherlands, email: maartenm@sepa.tudelft.nl

3. National sociological associations

National sociological associations have been given little attention in the history of sociology, but they play a significant role in it both organisationally and intellectually, though that role has differed considerably from one country or period to another. This session will attempt to compare different associations and to relate them to their social contexts. The issues raised may range from their internal organisation and membership to their external political roles, and will include both their intellectual functions and their concern for such matters as research funding and members' employment. (A detailed list of topics which it might be relevant to cover will be circulated to those interested.)

Organiser: •Jennifer PLATT, Arts E, Univ Sussex, Brighton BN1 9QN, Sussex, England, email: j.platt@sussex.ac.uk

4. Histories of the use of sociological concepts in sociological research

Concepts mediate the relationship between theory and empirical research. The focus would be on the history of such use of particular concepts; examples could include anomie, social cohesion, charisma, social class, party self-identification, self-reported illness, poverty, religious belief. Discussion of any suitable concept would be considered.

Organiser: •Martin BULMER, Dept Sociology, Univ Surrey, Guildford, Surrey GU2 5XH, UK, email: m.bulmer@soc.surrey.ac.uk

5. Interconnections between early sociology and social policy

The interventions of early sociologists in the practical, political arena of social policy.

Organiser: •Rosalind SYDIE, Dept Sociology, Univ Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta T6G 2H4, Canada, email: rsydie@gpu.srv.ualberta.ca

6. The Myrdals and modernity

Gunnar Myrdal was born in 1898, and played a quite significant role in the diffusion of some important strands of thought, carrying Chicago School concepts to Sweden and instrumental reform-minded policy analysis to the USA. He was influenced by Max Weber (scientific value-relativism) and Axel Haegerstrom (Scandinavian legal realism), and was successful on the American scene. His career, moreover, manifests the role of American philanthropy in the development of European as well as American social science. There is rich source material on him which has hardly been utilised. Papers relating to Alva Myrdal as well are most welcome. The Myrdals wrote books and travelled together and contributed to the same project of modernity and piecemeal social engineering. Key concepts: secularisation, intellectual migration, national styles of research, value freedom/-orientation, instrumental means/end analyses, anti-metaphysics, social engineering.

Organiser: •Sven ELIAESON, Box 3524 Naset, Saxhyttan, 71294 Grythyttan, Sweden

7. L'histoire de la sociologie canadienne / The history of Canadian sociology

Les thèmes suggérés sont les suivants: les individus clefs, surtout ceux qui n'ont particulièrement reçu beaucoup d'attention; le développement de sociologies régionales (du Québec, des Maritimes, de l'Ontario, des Prairies ou de la Colombie Britannique); des liens historiques entre la sociologie et les autres disciplines (ex. Anthropologie, économie politique, études des femmes, histoire sociale, philosophie...); de l'histoire des domaines substantifs, théories ou approches méthodologiques.

Suggested topics include: key individuals, especially those who have not yet received a great deal of attention; the development of regional sociologies (British Columbia, the Prairies, Ontario, Québec, the Maritimes); the historical links between sociology and other disciplines (e.g. anthropology, philosophy, political economy, social history, women's studies...); the history of substantive areas, theories or methodological approaches.

Organiser: •Richard HELMES-HAYES, Dept Sociology, Univ Waterloo, Ontario, Canada N2L 3G1, email: rhh@uwaterloo.ca

8. The history of sociology and the stabilisation of disciplinary identity.

The debate around postmodernism, post-structuralism and systems theory has shown to what extent sociology is still far from being capable of drawing its boundaries towards either other social science disciplines or the free floating discourse of public opinion. This lack is often filled by resorting to the history of sociology as a way of stabilising a specific disciplinary identity. The session should therefore aim at investigating the role of the history of sociology by both mapping out the development of different historiographies, and questioning the performative function of their narration. In this light, a particular emphasis should be given to the constitution of a disciplinary canon and to the role attributed to the 'founding fathers' within it.

Organisers: • Paolo BARBESINO, CulCom, Univ Sussex, Brighton BN1 9RQ, Sussex, England, email: p.barbesino@sussex.ac.uk and •Salvino SALVAGGIO, 76 rue du Roi Albert, 4102 Ougree, Belgium, email: ssalvaggio@arcadis.be

9. The founding of German sociology: intellectual origins and social contexts.

Organisers: •Theresa WOBBE, Inst Sociology, Free Univ, Babelsbergerstr. 14-16, 10715 Berlin, German

•John P. DRYSDALE, 4015 Hampton Ave., Montréal, Québec H4A 2L1, Canada, email: drysdal@vax2.concordia.ca

10. East European traditions of sociology.

Organiser: •Eva KARADI, Dept Philosophy, Univ Budapest ELTE, Egyetem ter 1, 1364 Budapest, Hungary, email: h3612tor@ella.hu

12. Studies and restudies of communities.

What can we learn from such studies about the history of sociology? This could be approached through looking at either classic one-off community studies, or restudies.

Organiser: •Jean-Michel CHAPOULIE, 4 Allée de la Tournelle, 91370 Verrières-le-Buisson, France

13. Harriet Martineau and the theoretical foundations of modern sociology.

Papers are invited on the continuing relevance of this pioneering British sociologist's work in sociology today, the sociobiographical location of Martineau's ideas and intellectual networks, Martineau's shifting fortunes in the sociology of knowledge, and the epistemological origins of modern sociology exemplified in her work. Topics especially welcomed will include her theoretical position and development over time, and the epistemological framework implicit in her translation / abridgment of Comte's Positive Philosophy.

Organiser: •Michael R. HILL, 2701 Sewell St., Lincoln, Nebraska 68502, USA

14. Hegel's social theory.

Despite the numerous references to Hegel in sociology and social theory insufficient attention has been paid to his ideas. This session would be devoted to helping to rectify this situation. Hegel is a dialectical thinker, and that means in part that he is one of the foremost thinkers who had a deep and abiding interest in social interaction at all levels. Topics in this session might include Hegel on recognition, on the family, the community, the society and the state, as well as his influence on sociological traditions.

Organiser: •Christopher ADAIR-TOTEFF, American Univ, 2700 Blagoevgrad, Bulgaria, email: csat@nws.aubg.bg

15. Fin-de-siècle journals: the Année Sociologique and the American Journal of Sociology.

1998 will be the 100th anniversary of the first publication of the Année Sociologique, which started with leadoff articles by Durkheim and Simmel; the ASJ was already in its fourth year of publication. This session would enable participants to make comparisons regarding the contents, contributors, approaches and impacts of the two journals on their respective sides of the Atlantic.

Organiser: •E.A. TIRYAKIAN, Dept Sociology, Duke Univ, Durham, NC 27706, USA, email: durkhm@soc.duke.edu

16. General session.

This session is for papers which do not fit the remit of any other session. Only complete papers will be considered for it; an abstract is not sufficient.

Call for Participation and Papers

DIALOGUE: A University Scholarship Program for Women in Developing Countries

 Dialogue is a scholarship program established by the International Institute of Sociology (IIS) to increase the development prospects of families, communities, and countries in the developing world through reducing the education gap between males and females. "Educating women means educating the future."

Fact: The income gap between North and South is growing. According to the World Bank (1995), per capita income in the developed countries is 52 times greater than it is in the developing countries.

Fact: There is a strong relationship between education and socioeconomic development. Countries with high enrollments in education have a higher GNP per capita, greater labor productivity, more equitable income distribution, lower population growth, and healthier populations than countries with lower enrollments.

Fact: On many measures, educating females produces greater development benefits than educating males. Because of predominant gender roles, and the fact that women are primarily responsible for the health, nutrition, and care of all family members, especially children, educating females produces outcomes different than educating males. In families and nations in which women are educated, there are fewer, healthier children who are raised to deal more effectively with the challenges that confront them.

Fact: In the developing world, girls are routinely denied access to education, especially in South Asia and Sub-Saharan Africa. Of the one billion illiterate people in the world today, nearly two-thirds are women.

In order to address these facts, in 1995 the International Institute of Sociology (IIS) established the Dialogue University Scholarship Program for Women in Developing Countries. Dialogue awards promising women in developing countries graduate scholarships to study any discipline in their choice of countries where the IIS has members. Our goal is to generate a core of professionally trained women who will return to their own countries to act as role models and further the education of other women and girls. In turn, an ever-widening ripple effect will extend throughout society and across generations. Dialogue trains the trainers.

How Dialogue works. The membership structure of the IIS offers a unique and effective way to set up the scholarship program. The IIS comprises approximately 300 university professors in 40 countries. Members are encouraged to invite their university presidents to join the Dialogue global consortium through tuition fee bursaries. Participating universities evaluate applicants for bursaries, and the IIS further awards successful candidates with Dialogue scholarships for travel, accommodation, and textbooks.

The Dialogue program can conceivably offer scholarships anywhere in the world there are IIS members. Not only does multi-university support help tremendously in funding the program, it increases choice for students, permits options on language of instruction, and facilitates location in compatible physical and cultural environments. A central IIS Dialogue Council administers the overall program and raises scholarship funds.

How you can help Dialogue. If you are convinced by the facts and interested in the Dialogue solution, please contact the Director of the IIS Dialogue Council R. Alan Hedley, Dept Sociology, Univ Victoria, POB 3050, Victoria, BC V8W 3P5, Canada, tel: 1-250-7217571, fax: 1-250-7216217, email: rahedley@uvic.ca

Teaching Sociology

Teaching Sociology, an official journal of the American Sociological Association, seeks to build its pool of occasional reviewers of manuscripts. Individuals who teach in all areas of sociology and with all sociological backgrounds are welcome. Occasional reviewers can expect to receive between one manuscript per month to one manuscript every two to three months. Social Scientist Position at the World Bank

The World Bank is currently seeking a Social Scientist for the Policy Research Department, Poverty & Human Resources Division, Development Economics Vice Presidency, based at the Headquarters in Washington, DC.

The Development Economics (DEC) Vice Presidency is responsible for integrating research and policy work in international economics, macroeconomics, and microeconomics into Bank operations. The Policy Research Department (PRD) engages in research on the full range of macro and microeconomic issues underpinning the Bank's country assistance strategies and operations. The Department produces major cross-cutting research studies; offers the means to test and disseminate state-of-the-art analytical approaches in an operational context; and provides operational and country-based experience to its staff. The Poverty & Human Resource Division does original analytical and quantitative research on the measurement and determinants of poverty reduction, on social transfers and safety net programs, and on investments in human resources.

Areas of Responsibility

To complement its strong economic staff, the Division is looking to hire a non-economist social scientist to design and implement research that fits into the division's growing work program on the interaction between economic and social development.

The research will focus on the ways in which communities cooperate to serve common goals in developing country settings. This includes work on community action, 'social capital', participation, and local capacity, especially as these relate to the impact on human resources investments, as well as research on the 'moral economy', including private transfers between and/or within households interpretable as informal (non-governmental) safety nets.

Selection Criteria

1. PhD in Social Sciences, with special preference for sociology, anthropology or political economy.
2. At least five years experience conducting research focused on the interaction between economic and social development.
3. Track record of publication in internationally recognized, scholarly, peer-reviewed journals.
4. Experience working with multidisciplinary teams, including economists.
5. Ability to communicate policy implications of research to a broad audience, including willingness to advise governments on related matters.

CURRENT SOCIOLOGY

Each issue of Current Sociology is devoted to a comprehensive Trend Report on a topic of interest to the international community of sociologists. Authors review current trends in all areas of sociological work - theories, methods, concepts, substantive research and national or regional developments. The aim is to analyze ongoing controversies and new tendencies, sketch desirable lines of future work and provide extensive bibliographies. From time to time commentaries on Trend Reports are published in subsequent issues of the journal. Since its inception in 1952, Current Sociology has published Trend Reports by some of the world's leading sociologists, such as S.M. Miller's classic on Comparative Social Mobility (1960). More recently, the journal has covered topics of growing importance with the discipline such as the sociology of law, the sociology of the body, economic sociology, and the sociology of legitimization. Issues are published in French or English, but a text in one language is always accompanied by an extensive résumé in the other. Current Sociology is an official journal of the International Sociological Association. Its main aim is to review international developments in the discipline and to provide a forum at which professional sociologists from all countries can communicate with the widest group of colleagues.

If you would like to propose a Trend Report, please send the Editor an outline of the proposed issues and a brief curriculum vitae. A style sheet and detailed notes are available. Contributions may be written in English, French or Spanish.

SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS

Co-sponsored by the ISA, sociological abstracts (sa) includes non evaluative abstracts of journal articles from more than 2,000 core and discipline-related serials, plus citations of relevant dissertation taken from Dissertation Abstracts International. Published six times a year, each issue of sa contains the following: a brief user's guide; a table of contents which lists the major sa classifications with their subcategories; an author index; a source index; a subject index; and a supplement International Review of Publications in Sociology consisting of extensive abstracts of selected books published worldwide and enhanced bibliographic citations of book reviews taken from the journals abstracted in the same issue. A Conference Abstracts Supplement (CAS), published annually, contains abstracts of papers presented at various conferences throughout the year.

Selection and coverage: three types of journals have been distinguished in the following order of priority:

Type 1 - journals published by sociological associations, groups, faculties and institutes, and periodicals containing the word 'sociology' in their titles. These are abstracted fully, irrespective of language of publication.

Type 2 - journals from such related areas as anthropology, economics, education, medicine, community development, philosophy, statistics, political science, etc. Such journals are abstracted selectively.

Type 3 - journals from the humanities and journals of general circulation wherein scholars and laymen publish discussions or criticism of sociology and sociological topics. These journals are abstracted selectively.

Publishers and editors are urged to send copies of new publications for abstracting.

Guidelines for Contributors

1. Contributions may be submitted in any language, but will be published only in English. Contributions in English may be sent to the Editor-in-Chief or Associate Editors, in other languages to the appropriate editor, as indicated above.

Where there is no indication of editorial coverage of a language, advice should be sought from the Editor-in-Chief. Authors of papers in other languages may receive translation assistance in suitable cases. Papers are refereed by an international panel whose names appear in the fourth issue of each year.

2. Contributions are considered for publication only on the understanding that they are not simultaneously under consideration elsewhere in English, that they are the original work of the author(s), and that any previous form of publication and any current consideration in other languages are disclosed. Copyright is retained by the author, but the Journal is licensed to reprint.
3. Standard length of papers is 6000 words, but shorter contributions are also welcomed. They should be typed, double spaced on one side of paper with margins of 3 cm.
4. Two copies should be submitted (although one will be sufficient). They will not normally be returned, so authors should ensure they keep a copy.
5. Title, author's name, full address and brief biographical note should be typed on a separate sheet.
6. An Abstract of 100-200 words should also be typed on a separate sheet.
7. Figures, maps and diagrams should be precisely and boldly drawn to permit photographic reproduction. Use single quotation marks (except for quotes within quotes).
8. Notes should appear at the end of the text. Referencing in the text should be as follows: (Archer 1982: 157). Recommended style for the bibliography is:
ARCHER, M.S. ed. 1982. The Sociology of Educational Expansion. London: Sage.
SAYAD, A. 1984. 'Tendances et courants des publications en sciences sociales sur l'immigration en France depuis 1960'. Current Sociology 32: 219-304.

9. Edited word-processed copy will be sent to the author for checking, but proofs will be corrected by the Editor.
10. Authors receive 25 offprints free of charge and may purchase high quality photocopies if they order them when returning word-processed copy.
