The Aims of our Common Work

While we are entering the third millennium there is a greater need than ever for sociological imagination, scientific excellence, intellectual probity, and moral commitment to a better world, a world more peaceful and more respectful of the dignity of all women and men. The ISA can contribute significantly to meet this need.

The objectives set 50 years ago by UNESCO's Social Science Council in promoting the ISA and parallel worldwide associations - such as knitting together social science scholars of the world in order to increase international understanding, bettering social science knowledge for benefitting mankind, promoting research in fields crucial to the establishment of a peaceful world order - are still well alive and important, and must be taken very seriously in our daily work. But they must be put into the context of the contemporary global world, which is characterized by the growing tension between the increasingly global integration and interdependence in technology, finance, information, and the continuing fragmentation of societies, cultures, and political systems.

International non-governmental organizations, in general, and international scientific and professional associations in particular, should become - and will more and more become - major actors of the world stage. Key decisions of global impact should not be left only to the governments of the most powerful nation-states and to international governmental organizations, to multinational corporations and global financial networks, to political-ideological alliances and religious fundamentalism, since all those actors inspire their conduct to power and gain, or tend to impose a given Weltanschauung.

International scientific associations can play a beneficial, countervailing role insofar as they are able to build truly global communities of scholars and inspire their conduct to universalistic principles, on the basis of which everyone is evaluated in terms of her/his scientific achievements, capacity to teach, and professional ethics, and not in terms of gender, ethnicity, age, or nationality.

In order to play this beneficial role in a global world the ISA must become a truly international and global organization itself. Our association has gone a long way since its foundation almost 50 years ago. The ISA has grown from a small scientific society with a few dozen members mostly from the US and Western Europe to a large international organization with 3300 individual and 150 collective members from 89 countries and more than 4000 active participants to our world congresses. The ISA has progressed toward internationalization more than most other international scientific associations, as the composition of most research committees as well as many of its activities show, from the regional conferences to the Worldwide Young Sociologists' Competition, to the official adoption of multi-linguism in our Statutes.

But more must be done, and can be done. As I stated in setting my priorities as a nominee for president, the ISA should become a truly global association while enhancing the different cultural heritages. And, as the Report of the Bureau of International Sociology writes, "the acknowledgment of the role of language in the development of individual and collective identities must be rendered compatible with sociology's search for universality".

Let me give a few examples of the kind of initiatives I have in mind to pursue this goal. First, ISA will sponsor and actively support selected comparative projects, developed by international teams, where sociologists from economically weaker countries can be significantly helped and where non ethnocentric models can be worked out. We will encourage scientific cooperation not only between the 'north' and the 'south' of the world, but also between different regions of the 'south' itself without the mediation of the core countries. Second, we will organize a traveling International Summer School for the best young sociologists; the participants can be selected with the same procedure of the International Young Sociologists' Competition, the teachers should be major figures in our discipline, the host institutions can rotate and 'travel' to different parts of the world. We can hope that relations of friendships and habits of working together will last in the hearts and minds of participants and will build strong ties and commitments to future cooperation. Third, through our Research and Publications Committees, we will encourage Research Committees to publish a series of textbooks in Sociology with a truly global, non parochial perspective which can contribute to internationalise the curriculum. I am myself engaged in the drafting of the proposal for a multilingual dictionary of key sociological concepts - the first of its kind - with the aim of enhancing our consciousness of the intellectual history of concepts and of the major differences in the production and use of the basic categories of sociological analysis in different languages. Fourth, in cooperation with the national and regional associations, we will organize a series of regional conferences, continuing with work done by Immanuel Wallerstein.

Through these initiatives the ISA will be able to help us to better our work as sociologists both in research and teaching. An international association is an ideal setting for confronting and exchanging experiences, disseminating information, diffusing innovations and monitoring their effects. As ISA members, we do not fully exploit the great opportunities for cooperation in research and teaching which stem from the international networks we have built. We will closely cooperate with national and regional associations of sociologists in this respect. We will consider the possibility of organizing prizes for the sociological book of the year, the best educational program, the recognition of excellent life-long careers in sociological work, and the like.

A third major concern of my presidency will be the enhancement of the prestige of sociology as a discipline. As we know, individual sociologists can become presidents of great republics such as Brazil and Venezuela, influential intellectuals and opinion makers, leaders of collective movements, government experts, etc. But, as a whole, the influence of sociological knowledge is not fully recognized in international and national institutions, in productive organizations, as well as in many professional fields. I am not arguing here that sociology should be only applied sociology, or become a kind of 'sociological engineering'; I am saying that were the sociological perspective more taken into account by international organizations, government agencies, and corporations, major mistakes stemming from an over-technocratic or over-economic view of man and society could be avoided; and that were sociological theory and method more widely and usefully employed than they are now in the professional education of doctors, managers, judges, lawyers, civil servants, social workers, nurses, architects, engineers, media professionals, etc. the quality of these professional services will be better. Concrete actions in these areas include producing high-quality sociological research books, making the sociologists' voice heard in the public discourse, designing higher education curricula with professional associations, disseminating information about employment opportunities in international organizations.

In particular, I will commit myself to supporting those sociological communities which are under attack by authoritarian governments. I am in fact convinced that a basic priority of an international scientific organization is the staunch defence of the basic rights and freedom of scientific inquiry, intellectual debate, and freedom of teaching.

As President, I also intend to strengthen and better our organization along the lines of my speech on the elections evening: accountable leadership, team work, transparent and democratic decision making. I believe that the ISA's president is a primus inter pares and that decisions should be taken collectively. In my view, democratic leadership is the art of promoting and coordinating cooperation in order to achieve common goals in the interest of our constituency and of our institution. This does not imply of course that I am not prepared to take full responsibility for ISA's activities and the accurate implementation of our decisions.

I will do whatever I can to make the whole ISA a place of genuine and active debate about the fundamental issue that face us as scholars and concerned members of the world community. The three pillars of our institutional fabric are the national associations, the research committees, and the individual members. Together with the Executive Committee - which already works as a real team and a group of friends - I am committed to work in closer cooperation with all of them.

I am proud of representing the world sociological community. Let us work together for sociological excellence in research and teaching and for the scientific and social legitimization of our discipline in a genuinely global association.

Lettre du Président, No. 1, Octobre 1998 de Alberto Martinelli

Les objectifs de notre travail commun

Alors que nous entrons dans le troisième millénaire, il existe un besoin toujours plus fort d'imagination sociologique, d'excellence scientifique, de probité intellectuelle et d'engagement moral pour un monde meilleur, un monde plus pacifique et plus respectueux de la dignité de tous les femmes et hommes. L'AIS peut contribuer de manière à satisfaire ce besoin.

Les objectifs établis il y a 50 ans par le Conseil des Sciences Sociales de l'UNESCO lors de la promotion de l'AIS et d'associations mondiales analogues - tels que ceux d'unir les spécialistes en sciences sociales du monde entier en vue de développer la compréhension internationale, d'améliorer la connaissance en sciences sociales pour le bien de l'humanité, de promouvoir la recherche dans les domaines décisifs à l'établissement d'un ordre mondial pacifique - sont toujours à l'ordre du jour et importants, et doivent être pris très au sérieux dans notre travail quotidien. Mais ils doivent être replacés dans le contexte du monde global contemporain, caractérisé par la tension croissante entre d'une part l'intégration toujours plus globale et l'interdépendance de la technologie, des finances et de l'information, et d'autre part la fragmentation continue des sociétés, des cultures et des systèmes politiques.

Les organisations non gouvernementales internationales, en général, et les associations professionnelles et scientifiques internationales, en particulier, doivent devenir - et elles le deviendront de plus en plus - les acteurs principaux de la scène mondiale. Les décisions fondamentales ayant un impact global ne doivent pas être laissées uniquement aux gouvernements des États-Nations les plus puissants et aux organisations gouvernementales internationales, aux compagnies multinationales et aux réseaux financiers globaux, aux alliances politique-idéologiques et au fondamentalisme religieux. Car tous ces acteurs sont inspirés dans leur comportement par le pouvoir et le profit ou tendent à imposer une Weltanschauung donnée.

Les associations scientifiques internationales peuvent jouer un rôle salubre et compensateur à condition d'être capables de construire des communautés de scientifiques véritablement globales et d'être inspirées dans leur comportement par des principes universalistes, selon lesquels chacun est évalué en fonction de ses réalisations scientifiques, capacité à enseigner, éthique professionnelle, et non en fonction des genre, ethnies, âge ou nationalité.

Afin de jouer ce rôle salubre dans un monde global, l'AIS doit elle-même devenir une organisation véritablement internationale et globale. Notre association a parcouru un long chemin depuis sa fondation il y a presque 50 ans. L'AIS, partie d'une petite société scientifique d'une douzaine de membres originaires principalement des États-Unis et d'Europe de l'Ouest, est devenue une grande organisation internationale comprenant 3300 membres individuels et 150 membres collectifs originaires de 89 pays, et réunissant plus de 4000 participants actifs lors de nos congrès mondiaux. L'AIS s'est internationalisée davantage que la plupart des autres associations scientifiques internationales; en témoignent la composition de la plupart de ses Comités de Recherche, nombre de ses activités, des conférences régionales au Concours Mondial de Jeunes Sociologues et l'adoption officielle du multilinguisme dans nos Statuts.

Mais davantage doit être fait et peut être fait. Ainsi que je l'ai déclaré en tant que candidat à la présidence lors de la présentation de mes priorités, l' AIS doit devenir une association véritablement globale tout en valorisant les différents héritages culturels. Et, ainsi qu'il est écrit dans le Rapport du Bureau de Sociologie International, "la reconnaissance du rôle de la langue dans le développement des identités individuelles et collectives doit être compatible avec la recherche de l'universalité par la sociologie".

Laissez-moi donner quelques exemples du type d'initiative que j'ai à l'esprit pour poursuivre cet objectif. Premièrement, l' AIS sponsorisera et soutiendra activement des projets comparatifs sélectionnés, développés par des équipes internationales, où des sociologues de pays économiquement plus fiables pourront être aidés de manière significative et des modèles non ethnocentriques élaborés. Nous encouragerons la coopération scientifique non seulement entre le "nord" et le "sud" de la planète mais aussi entre les différentes régions du "sud" lui-même sans la médiation des pays centraux. Deuxièmement, nous organiserons une Université d'Été Internationale itinérante pour les meilleurs jeunes sociologues; les participants pourront être sélectionnés selon la même procédure que celle du Concours Mondial de Jeunes Sociologues, les enseignants devront être des personnalités majeures de notre discipline, les institutions hôtes pourront se succéder et voyager dans différentes parties du monde. Nous espérons que des relations d'amitié et des habitudes de travail en groupe lieront les cœurs et les esprits des participants et déboucheront sur des engagements solides dans de futures coopérations. Troisièmement, au sein de nos Comités de Recherche et de Publications, nous encouragerons les Comités de Recherche à publier une série de recueils de textes de sociologie dotés d'une perspective véritablement globale, non paroissiale, qui pourra contribuer à internationaliser le programme d'études. Je suis moi-même occupé à la rédaction d'une proposition de dictionnaire multilingue de concepts sociologiques fondamentaux - le premier du genre - dans le but d'augmenter notre conscience de l'histoire intellectuelle des concepts et des grandes différences de production et d'emploi des catégories fondamentales de l'analyse sociologique dans différentes langues. Quatrièmement, en coopération avec les associations nationales et régionales, nous organiserons une série de conférences régionales, dans la poursuite de l'oeuvre d'Immanuel Wallerstein.

Grâce à ces initiatives l' AIS pourra nous aider à améliorer notre travail de sociologues à la fois dans la recherche et l'enseignement. Une association internationale est un cadre idéal pour la confrontation et l'échange d'expériences, la propagation de l'information, la diffusion des innovations et le suivi de leurs effets. En tant que membres de l' AIS nous ne profitons pas complètement des grandes occasions de coopération dans la recherche et l'enseignement qui naissent des réseaux internationaux que nous avons construits. Nous coopérerons étroitement avec les associations nationales et régionales de sociologues à ce sujet. Nous étudierons la possibilité d'organiser des prix pour le livre sociologique de l'année, le meilleur programme d'enseignement, les longues et brillantes carrières en sociologie, et autres mérites de ce genre.

Une troisième préoccupation principale de ma présidence sera le rehaussement du prestige de la sociologie en tant que discipline. Ainsi que nous le savons, des sociologues individuels peuvent devenir présidents de grandes républiques telles que le Brésil et le Venezuela, des intellectuels influents et des faiseurs d'opinion, des leaders de mouvements collectifs, des experts gouvernementaux etc. mais, dans l'ensemble, l'importance de la connaissance sociologique n'est pas complètement reconnue dans les institutions internationales et nationales, dans les organisations productives ainsi que dans de nombreux domaines professionnels. Je ne soutiens pas, là, que la sociologie doive seulement être de la sociologie appliquée, ou devenir une sorte d'ingénierie sociologique, je dis que si la perspective sociologique était davantage prise en compte par les organisations internationales, les organismes gouvernementaux et les sociétés commerciales, on pourrait peut-être éviter de grosses erreurs dues à une approche de l'homme et de la société trop technocratique et trop économique; et si la théorie et la méthode sociologiques étaient plus largement et utilement employées qu'elles ne le sont actuellement dans la formation professionnelle des médecins, des cadres, des juges, des juristes, des fonctionnaires, des infirmières, des architectes, des ingénieurs, des professionnels des médias, etc., la qualité de ces services professionnels serait meilleure. Des actions concrètes dans ce domaine englobent la réalisation de livres de recherche sociologique d'excellente qualité, faire entendre la voix des sociologues dans le discours public, élaboration de programmes d'études d'enseignement supérieur avec les associations professionnelles, la diffusion de l'information concernant les possibilités d'emploi dans les organisations internationales.

"Je suis en fait convaincu qu'une des priorités essentielles d'une organisation scientifique internationale est de défendre fermement les droits fondamentaux et la liberté de l'investigation scientifique, du débat intellectuel et de la liberté d'enseignement."

En particulier, je m'engagerai personnellement à soutenir ces communautés sociologiques en butte aux gouvernements autoritaires. Je suis en fait convaincu qu'une des priorités essentielles d'une organisation scientifique internationale est de défendre fermement les droits fondamentaux et la liberté de l'investigation scientifique, du débat intellectuel et de la liberté d'enseignement.

En tant que Président, je me propose également de consolider et d'améliorer notre organisation dans la ligne de mon discours du soir des élections: une direction responsable, un travail d'équipe, une prise de décision transparente et démocratique. Je pense que le président de l' AIS est un primus inter pares et que les décisions doivent être prises collectivement. D'après moi, une direction démocratique est l'art de promouvoir et de coordonner la coopération afin de réaliser des objectifs communs dans l'intérêt de nos électeurs et de notre institution. Cela ne signifie pas, bien évidemment, que je ne suis pas disposé à assumer la responsabilité des activités de l' AIS et de l'exécution exacte de nos décisions.

Je ferai tout mon possible pour faire de l' AIS dans son ensemble un lieu de débat authentique et actif sur les questions fondamentales qui se posent à nous en tant que scientifiques et membres intéressés de la communauté mondiale. Les trois piliers de notre construction institutionnelle sont les associations nationales, les comités de recherche et les membres individuels. Avec le Comité Exécutif - qui fonctionne déjà comme une véritable équipe et un groupe d'amis - nous nous sommes engagés à travailler en étroite coopération avec chacun d'eux. Je suis fier de représenter la communauté sociologique mondiale. Travaillons ensemble pour l'excellence sociologique dans la recherche et l'enseignement et pour la légitimation scientifique et sociale de notre discipline dans une association authentiquement globale.

Carta del Presidente, No. 1, octubre 1998 por Alberto Martinelli

Los objetivos de nuestro trabajo común

Al entrar en el tercer milenio hay una necesidad, más grande que nunca, de imaginación sociológica, excelencia científica, honestidad intelectual, y compromiso moral para un mundo mejor, un mundo más pacífico y con más respeto para la dignidad de todas las mujeres y hombres. La AIS puede contribuir significativamente a satisfacer esta necesidad.

Los objetivos definidos hace 50 años por el Consejo de Ciencias Sociales de la UNESCO en la fundación de la AIS y otras asociaciones mundiales paralelas - tal como unir los científicos sociales del mundo para incrementar el entendimiento internacional, mejorar el conocimiento en las ciencias sociales para el beneficio de la humanidad, promocionar la investigación en campos cruciales para el mantenimiento de un orden mundial pacífico - siguen estando vivos y debemos tenerlos en cuenta en nuestro trabajo diario. Pero deben ser vistos en el contexto del mundo global contemporáneo, que se caracteriza por la tensión creciente entre la integración global que aumenta y la interdependencia entre tecnología, finanzas, información, y la continua fragmentación de sociedades, culturas y sistemas políticos.

Las organizaciones internacionales no-gubernamentales, en general, y las asociaciones internacionales científicas y profesionales, en particular, deben llegar a ser - y llegarán a ser cada vez más - los actores principales de la escena mundial. Las decisiones clave sobre el impacto global no deberían dejarse solo a los gobiernos de las más poderosas naciones-estados ni a las organizaciones internacionales gubernamentales, ni a las corporaciones multinacionales, ni a las redes financieras globales, ni a las alianzas político-ideológicas, ni al fundamentalismo religioso, porque todos estos actores inspiran su conducta en el poder y ganancia, o tienden a imponer un Weltanschauung establecido.

Las asociaciones científicas internacionales pueden jugar un papel beneficioso y de contrapeso en la medida en que sean capaces de construir verdaderas comunidades globales de científicos e inspirar su conducta en los principios universalistas, según los cuales cada uno es evaluado en función de sus logros científicos, capacidad de enseñar, y ética profesional, y no en función del género, etnia, edad o nacionalidad.

Para jugar este papel beneficioso en un mundo global la AIS tiene que llegar a ser una verdadera organización internacional y global. Nuestra asociación ha hecho un largo camino desde su fundación hace 50 años. La AIS empezó como una pequeña sociedad científica con una docena de miembros, en su mayoría de los Estados Unidos y Europa occidental, y ha llegado a ser una gran organización internacional con 3300 miembros individuales y 150 colectivos de 89 países y más de 4000 participantes activos en nuestros congresos mundiales. La AIS ha progresado hacia la internacionalización más que la mayoría de las otras organizaciones científicas internacionales, como lo muestra la composición de la mayoría de los comités de investigación así como sus numerosas actividades, desde las conferencias regionales hasta el Concurso Mundial de Jóvenes Sociólogos, o incluso la adopción oficial del multilingüismo en nuestros estatutos.

Pero se debe hacer más, y se puede hacer más. Como ya dije en la presentación de mis objetivos en la candidatura a la presidencia, la AIS debe llegar a ser una verdadera asociación global al mismo tiempo que intensifica las diferentes herencias culturales. Y, como dice el Informe del Bureau de Sociología Internacional, "el reconocimiento del papel del idioma en el desarrollo de la identidad individual y colectiva debe ser compatible con la búsqueda por parte de la sociología de la universalidad".

Permítame dar unos pocos ejemplos de la clase de iniciativa que tengo en mente para conseguir este objetivo. Primero, la AIS patrocinará y apoyará activamente proyectos comparativos escogidos, presentados por equipos internacionales, donde los sociólogos de los países económicamente más débiles puedan obtener ayuda y donde se puedan desarrollar modelos no etnocéntricos. La AIS animará la cooperación científica no sólo entre el "norte" y el "sur" del mundo sino también entre diferentes regiones del "sur" mismo sin la mediación de los países centrales. Segundo, la AIS organizará una Escuela Internacional de Verano, de carácter ambulatorio para los mejores jóvenes sociólogos; los participantes serán seleccionados con el mismo procedimiento que en el Concurso Mundial de Jóvenes Sociólogos, los profesores serán los mejores en nuestra disciplina, y las instituciones anfitrionas puedan rotar y 'viajar' a diferentes partes del mundo. Esperamos que las relaciones de amistad y hábitos de trabajo juntos seguirán en los corazones y mentes de los participantes y que construirán fuertes lazos y compromisos hacia una futura cooperación. Tercero, a través de nuestros Comités de Investigación y Publicaciones, la AIS animará a los Comités de Investigación a publicar una serie de libros de texto en Sociología con una perspectiva verdaderamente global y no parroquial y que puedan contribuir a la internacionalización de los currícula. Personalmente estoy envuelto en la preparación del proyecto de un diccionario multilingüe de conceptos claves en sociología - el primero en su clase - con el propósito de aumentar nuestra consciencia sobre la historia intelectual de los conceptos y de las principales diferencias en la producción y utilización de las categorías básicas del análisis sociológico en los diferentes idiomas. Cuarto, en cooperación con asociaciones regionales y nacionales, la AIS organizará una serie de conferencias regionales, continuando el trabajo hecho por Immanuel Wallerstein.

"Estoy de hecho convencido de que la prioridad básica de una organización científica internacional es la defensa incondicional de los derechos básicos y la libertad de la investigación científica, del debate intelectual y de la libertad de enseñanza."

A través de estas iniciativas la AIS será capaz de ayudarnos a mejorar nuestro trabajo como sociólogos tanto en la investigación como en la enseñanza. Una asociación internacional es un lugar ideal para confrontar e intercambiar experiencias, diseminar información, difundir innovaciones y observar sus efectos. Como miembros de la AIS, no aprovechamos suficientemente las grandes oportunidades para la cooperación en la investigación y la enseñanza que nacen de las redes internacionales que hemos construido. La AIS cooperará estrechamente en esta dirección con asociaciones nacionales y regionales de sociólogos. Se considerará la posibilidad de establecer premios para el libro sociológico del año, para el mejor programa educativo, para el reconocimiento de una destacada carrera profesional en el trabajo sociológico, etc.

Una tercera gran preocupación de mi presidencia será la mejora del prestigio de la sociología como una disciplina. Como todos sabemos, algunos sociólogos pueden llegar a ser presidentes de grandes repúblicas como Brasil y Venezuela, intelectuales influyentes y formadores de opinión, líderes de movimientos colectivos, expertos gubernamentales, etc. Pero, como un todo, la influencia del conocimiento sociológico no está plenamente reconocida en instituciones internacionales y nacionales, en organizaciones productivas, y tampoco en muchos campos profesionales. No estoy argumentando aquí que la sociología debe ser solo sociología aplicada, o deba ser una clase de "ingeniería sociológica"; estoy diciendo que si la perspectiva sociológica fuese más tenida en cuenta por las organizaciones internacionales, agencias gubernamentales y corporaciones, se podrían evitar la mayoría de los errores producidos por una visión del hombre y la sociedad excesivamente tecnocrática y economicista; si la teoría y el método sociológicos fuesen utilizados más ampliamente y provechosamente que hasta ahora en la educación profesional de médicos, ejecutivos, jueces, abogados, funcionarios, trabajadores sociales, enfermeras, arquitectos, ingenieros, profesionales de los medios de comunicación, etc. la calidad de estos servicios profesionales sería mejor. Las medidas concretas en estos campos incluyen la publicación de libros de investigación sociológica de alta calidad, hacer oír la voz de los sociólogos en el debate público, el diseño con asociaciones profesionales de los programas de estudios universitarios, la diseminación de información sobre oportunidades de empleo en organizaciones internacionales.

En particular, me comprometo a apoyar a aquellas comunidades sociológicas que están amenazadas por gobiernos autoritarios. Estoy de hecho convencido de que la prioridad básica de una organización científica internacional es la defensa incondicional de los derechos básicos y la libertad de la investigación científica, del debate intelectual y de la libertad de enseñanza.

Como Presidente, intentaré también fortalecer y mejorar nuestra organización siguiendo las líneas de mi discurso en la noche electoral: dirección transparente, trabajo en equipo, toma de decisiones clara y democrática. Creo que el presidente de la AIS es un primus inter pares y que las decisiones deben ser tomadas colectivamente. En mi opinión, la autoridad democrática es el arte de promocionar y coordinar la cooperación para lograr objetivos comunes en el interés de nuestros miembros y nuestra institución. Esto no implica, por supuesto, que yo no esté preparado para asumir plena responsabilidad en las actividades de la AIS y la puesta en práctica de nuestras decisiones.

Haré todo lo posible para hacer de toda la AIS un lugar de sincero y activo debate sobre los problemas fundamentales que afrontamos como académicos y como miembros conscientes de la comunidad mundial. Los tres pilares de nuestro tejido institucional son las asociaciones nacionales, los comités de investigación y los miembros individuales. Me comprometo junto con el Comité Ejecutivo - que ya trabaja como un verdadero equipo y un grupo de amigos - a trabajar con todos ellos en la más estrecha cooperación.

Me siento orgulloso de representar a la comunidad sociológica mundial. Vamos a trabajar juntos para la excelencia sociológica en la investigación y la enseñanza y para la legitimación científica y social de nuestra disciplina en una verdadera asociación global.

Technology. He is President of the Commission for International relations of the University of Milan.

Priorities

The ISA is almost 50 years old. It has performed a very relevant task in fostering the advancement of Sociology and the scientific cooperation of sociologists of many different countries. Yet, much more should be done and can be done according to these priorities.

First, the ISA should become a truly global association while enhancing the different cultural heritages. This can be achieved in a variety of ways: fostering dialogue and cooperation among sociologists of different countries; sponsoring international comparative research projects, organizing international conferences on such topics as compatible development, international migrations, global cultural trends and local cultures, and the like; using its scientific publications as active means for disseminating sociological knowledge within and outside the discipline; recruiting more members from Africa, Asia and Latin America; helping sociologists with less economic resources with funds for access to ISA activities.

Second, the ISA should contribute to better our work as sociologists both in research and teaching. In order to achieve this goal, it should monitor innovation in sociological research and teaching and favour the exchange of experiences among its members; it should inform its members of research financing opportunities and help to get them; it should promote the production of textbooks both general and in special fields - in a global, non parochial perspective; it should help developing international research projects, with special attention to younger sociologists and sociologists from countries where the discipline is less institutionalized.

Third, the ISA should enhance the influence and the prestige of sociology as a discipline. This means: making sociological advance and counselling better employed in international organization, such as UN, WHO, ILO, OECD, World Bank and the IMF, etc.; helping sociologists to work with those organizations by listing research and employment opportunities; consolidating and enhancing the role of sociological research and teaching in major professional fields - public policy, medicine, law, management, mass media, etc.; producing books of sociological applied theory for public administrators, doctors, judges and lawyers, managers, mass media professionals.

Fourth, and in order to achieve the previous goals, the ISA as an organization should be strengthened and bettered. This requires that the President acts as a coordinators and a promoter, capable of stimulating the intellectual energies of the Association's institutional and individual members; the Executive Committee works as a real team and a group of friends for the common goal; the scientific autonomy of Research Committees is strengthened, while providing them with more continuous organizational support; the cooperation of ISA with the regional and national associations and their cooperation among themselves are enhanced. In this respect, I think we should repeat and generalize previous experiences, asking the Research Committees and the national and regional associations to produce 'state of the art' reports - focussing on major theoretical results, methodological questions, institutional arrangements. These reports could eventually lead to a general report to be presented by the Executive Committee at the World Congress.

Vice-President for Programme Piotr Sztompka, Poland

Current position

Professor of Theoretical Sociology at the Jagiellonian University at Krakow (Poland). He has been a Visiting Professor at numerous universities in the US, Europe and Latin America. Member of Academia Europaea (London), and American Academy of Arts and Sciences (Cambridge, MA). Recipient of New Europe Prize 1995.

Selected publications

Among his twelve books, published internationally, there are: "Society in Action - The Theory of Social Becoming", Polity Press 1991, "The Sociology of Social Change", Blackwell 1993, "Agency and Structure, Gordon Breach 1994", "Robert K. Merton on Social Structure and Science" (ed), Chicago University Press 1996.

Organizational experience

Member of ISA from 1972, and speaker as well as session organizer at all World Congresses since that time. Co-founder (with J.Alexander) of the Research Committee on Sociological Theory (RC 16), and from 1994 member of the Executive Committee and Programme Committee of ISA. Organizer of two ISA international conferences.

Priorities

Extending the international academic exchanges in the periods between World Congresses, by means of ISA-sponsored thematic conferences, regional meetings, specialized symposia, all leading to internationally accessible publications.

Introducing regular ISA-sponsored prizes for the best book of the year, and the medals for distinguished career in sociology, granted to three persons every fourth year (at the World Congresses).

Developing new, discursive and adversarial formats of the sessions at the World Congresses (round-tables, debates and contests among representatives of opposite orientations, evaluations of the life-work of eminent authors by a group of critics with a response from the author, critical evaluation of influential books in the presence of the author, spontaneous debates among leading authors on the vital social issues etc.)

Preparing the World Congress at Brisbane, 2002, with a focus on the future of sociology in the just beginning 21st century. Under the title Sociology for the New Millennium, or Sociology at the Verge of the New Millennium, the programme should discuss expected orientations, trends, methodological and conceptual breakthroughs in sociology, as the possible responses to the vast agenda of challenges, problems and issues raised by the human societies in the coming age.

Chair, ISA Research Committee on Economy and Society(1990-94). Member, ISA Executive Committee (1994-98). International Vice-President, Society for the Advancement of Socio-Economics (1995-97). Organizer of several international conferences.

Priorities

Academic: - Ensure the continuity of ongoing projects initiated by Stella Quah during her term; - Encourage and support development of academic activities by RCs which constitute the academic heart of the ISA; - Be responsive to proposals, suggestions and requests from RCs as sources of new ideas; - Ensure that ISA RC administrative meetings are always tied with major academic conferences as Stella Quah and I did in Montreal in 1997. With the collaboration of the Research Committees, a conference would be organized for the year 2000 with a possible theme: "Social Transformations at the Turn of the Century: Sociological Theory and Current Empirical Research"; - With a view to promoting regular scientific exchanges among RCs, which are critical to the integration of the specializations inherent to our discipline, encourage groups of several RCs working in related fields to join forces and organize a joint conference to be held between the Montreal and Brisbane Congresses; - Discuss new formulas (for example, featured speakers and roundtables) for introducing special Research Committee sessions at the Brisbane World Congress.

Administrative: - Promote in a collegial spirit and with assistance from the ISA Secretariat, the smooth operation of RCs by maintaining regular communication with elected officers, namely as regards scientific activities, membership and international recruiting. Apply the Guidelines on Performance Evaluation approved at the ISA Research Council Meeting held in Montreal, August 1997. - Substantially increase funding the RCs receive from the ISA. Given the importance of RCs within the ISA, they currently receive very limited financial assistance, especially for the publication of newsletters which help promote membership. - Facilitate the expansion of their membership worldwide, which is vital to the ISA, and particularly improve the integration of membership data bases between the Research Committees and the ISA Secretariat through a modern data interchange system.

Vice-President for Publications Christine Inglis, Australia

Current position

Associate Professor in the School of Social and Policy Studies in Education, and Director, Multicultural Research Centre, University of Sydney.

Three principal writings

"Multiculturalism: New Policy Responses to Diversity" .Paris: UNESCO MOST Policy Papers no.4 (1996); "Making Something of Myself..." Educational Attainment and Social and Economic Mobility of Turkish Young People in Australia AGPS, Canberra (1992) with J.Elley and L. Manderson Asians in Australia: The Dynamics of Migration and Settlement .Sydney/Singapore: Allen & Unwin/ISEAS (1992) for which she was the main editor and wrote the Introduction as well as the Concluding chapter with C. T. Wu.

Organisational experience

Her organisational experience with ISA began in 1982 when she was elected as a Board member for RC05, a position which she held until 1990 when she was elected Vice-President and then, in 1994, President of RC05. In 1994 she was elected by the Research Council to the Executive Committee of the ISA. As a member of the EC she has i) chaired the sub-committee organising the Third Worldwide Competition for Young Sociologists; ii) been a member of the Programme Committee organising the Montreal Congress Program; iii) of the Finance Committee and, iv) of the Research Coordinating Committee. Other international organisation experience includes being a member of the committee which organised the first Asia Pacific Regional Conference of Sociology in Manila in 1996 which led to the formation last year of the Asia Pacific Sociological Association. She also organised in 1989 a joint conference in Singapore for the Centre for Advanced Studies of the National University of Singapore, the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies and the Asian Studies Association of Australia.

At the national level she has had extensive organisational experience with the Asian Studies Association of Australia serving on the Executive from 1980 to 1990 as General Councillor (1980-82), National Curriculum Officer (1982-84), Convenor of the Biennial Conference (1984-86) and Secretary (1986-90). As National Curriculum Officer she initiated with support from the Curriculum Development Centre of Australia a publication on Asia distributed to all Australian schools. As Secretary she was directly involved in the ASAA's 5 separate monograph publication series and in 1989 she was a founding member of the ASAA's Editorial Board for its "Women in Asia" series, an involvement which continued until 1996.

Priorities

International scholarly publishing is being affected by rapid technological changes associated with electronic publishing. Of even greater potential concern for more traditional monograph publications are the impact of international economic changes and reductions in subsidies coinciding with a declining library and general market. When combined with issues associated with publication in languages other than English there is a need to continually review how the ISA's contribution to the development of Sociology internationally can be continued and enhanced from its already solidly established role. Her work in the Asia-Pacific Region and, especially in the Young Sociologists Worldwide competition, underlies her interest to give priority to exploring how the publishing programme of the ISA can be developed to strengthen the development of sociology outside Europe and North America. The monographs based on the ISA Regional Conferences published in conjunction with the 1998 World Congress are an important initiative and the location of the 2002 ISA World Congress in Brisbane, Australia provides an important momentum for further developing ISA's contribution to greater diversity in international sociological publishing.

Priorities

1. To promote and increase membership, not only individuals, but especially institutions, to ensure much more self support for ISA activities from members themselves, and with the goal of providing more facilities for members from less developed countries.

2. To encourage and financially support academic thematic conferences based on the following conditions: (i) that the conference is promoted by a national association of a less developed country, and (ii) supported by at least three Research Committees that will help elaborate the academic programme, and (iii) that at least 50 individual ISA members from at least 10 countries commit themselves to attend the conference and participate in the discussion, and (iv) that a report of the conference, including presented papers, is made available to ISA.

Social Knowledge: Heritage, Challenges, Perspectives

Publications and video-tapes of the ISA Regional Conferences

ORDER FORM

International Sociological Association organized in 1996 and 1997 ten regional conferences around the globe, each addressing the theme of the recently held XIV World Congress of Sociology (Montreal, July 1998): Social Knowledge: Heritage, Challenges, Perspectives. The ten regional conferences each has produced a small book, discussing the state of sociology and its future not in the region but as seen from the region. There was also commissioned a special volume on this question as seen from the point of view of world feminism, and moreover a Southeast Asia volume was prepared after the Congress.

These volumes collectively represent a genuine insight into the range of views about sociology as it has developed in the different regions of the world. A world debate infused with the background of reading these 12 volumes may help us make a significant step forward in the construction of a genuinely international mode of analysis and create a common baseline of contributions by sociologists from around the globe.

Report on the ISA XIV World Congress of Sociology, Montreal 1998

The XIV World Congress of Sociology celebrated at the Congress Convention and Université du Québec à Montréal on July 26 - August 1, 1998, attracted 3757 participants from 89 countries who attended over 600 sessions of symposia, research committees, working and thematic groups. 3171 abstracts were published in a congress issue of Sociological Abstracts. (Note: ISA members interested in purchasing copies of Programme Book and/or Sociological Abstracts, please contact ISA Secretariat, fax 34-91-3524945, Email: isa@sis.ucm.es)

Montreal Congress was the last ISA congress of the twentieth century and took place 50 years after ISA's foundation. It was opened with a commemorative session celebrating the 50th History of ISA at which several ex officers of the ISA addressed the public and video messages from Rafael Caldera, President of Venezuela and Past President of the Latin American Sociological Association, and from Fernando Henrique Cardoso, President of Brazil and Past ISA President 1982-86, were shown.

The Programme Committee chose the theme of the Congress "Social Knowledge: Heritage, Challenges, Perspectives" to stimulate an intellectually challenging debates about the fundamental issues that confront social scientists on the turn of the centuries. This general theme was articulated into six more specific topics of the Symposia: Changing Identities and Social Orders; The Quality of Modern Life; Unequal Development;

Natural Parameters of Social Existence; and Social Science and Power: Knowledge for What?. Moreover, three plenary sessions of the Congress were devoted to: "The Heritage of Sociology, the Future of Social Science" a presidential address given by the out-going ISA President, Immanuel Wallerstein; "Social Knowledge and the Multiplicity of Languages and Cultures" chaired by Alain Touraine; and "The Future of Sociology and Social Sciences in the Twenty-first Century" chaired by Alberto Martinelli.

During the Congress week there were also held several meetings of the ISA administrative bodies: Executive Committee and its sub-committees, Research Council, Council of National Associations and Assembly of Councils. Election results are published on the previous pages of this Bulletin, and below are listed the most important decisions taken by the Executive Committee.

Research Committees, Working and Thematic Groups

1) Three new Research Committees are established: Research Committee 51 on Sociocybernetics (formerly WG01); Research Committee 52 on Sociology of Professional Groups (formerly WG02); and Research Committee 53 on Sociology of Childhood (formerly WG03).

2) If a Research Committee has less than 25 ISA members in good standing two years before the Congress it is automatically demoted to Working Group.

3) For the 2002 Brisbane Congress sessions will be allocated proportionally to the number of ISA members in good standing each Research Committee, Working and Thematic Group has at the time of allocating congress sessions. A Research Committee will be entitled to:

- 100% of available session slots if it has 100 ISA paid-up members
- 50% of available session slots if it has 50 ISA paid-up members
- 25% of available session slots if it has 25 ISA paid-up members

The same principles will be followed for the Working and Thematic Groups sessions.

Collective members

ISA membership of collective members who have not paid their membership dues for two consecutive years will be automatically discontinued.

ISA Code of Ethics

A sub-committee on ISA Code of Ethics composed of Vincenzo Ferrari (Chair), Linda Christiansen-Ruffman, Juan Díez-Nicolá and Göran Therborn will continue its work on drafting a code. ISA members are requested to send to the ISA Secretariat their suggestions for the committee.

Books of the XX Century

One of the major aims of the Montreal Congress, the last ISA congress organized in the twentieth century, was to make a critical assessment of sociological heritage. In this framework the ISA Programme Committee carried on in 1997 an opinion survey in order to identify ten most important books for sociologists. ISA members were asked to list five books published in the twentieth century which were most influential in their work as sociologists. 16% of ISA members (455 out of 2785) participated in the survey.

A special Congress round table session Books of the XX Century was organized by Piotr Sztompka, Jeffrey Alexander, Hans Joas, Stephen Mennel, Bernard Phillips, Ann Rawls and Loic Wacquant discussed the continuing significance of the selected books.

Further details on the survey are available on Internet at <http://www.ucm.es/info/isa/books/> or from ISA Secretariat in Madrid.

In Memoriam:

Elizabeth King 1949-1998

by Martin Albrow,
Founding Editor of International Sociology

Liz King, Associate Editor of the ISA journal International Sociology from 1984-1994, was found drowned on the shore of Chania, Crete on 24th April. All who remember her work in establishing that journal will recall the tireless dedication and effort she expended first in Cardiff, Wales and then in Bielefeld, Germany. The journal itself could not have begun without her special skills and a very large number of sociologists who knew her in that role will feel that a good friend has passed away.

Elisabeth Regina Utz was born in Germany of German parents. Her father was a village baker in Wilchingen, just inside the Swiss border, and after school there she attended a business studies course in Waldshut, Baden. At the age of 21 she came to London to learn English, eventually making it into another mother tongue, something which gave her enormous pleasure. She followed a course of education which culminated in her obtaining a first class degree in sociology from the Polytechnic of Central London in 1979. Throughout that time she worked in clerical, secretarial and administrative positions in firms and university departments. After a brief period in Liverpool, she arrived in Cardiff in 1981 and came into contact with the Sociology Department through her husband Michael King from whom she soon separated, remaining on good terms thereafter. She took a number of short-term jobs and became part-time secretary to the editor of Sociology in 1984, having worked previously on a translation of Niklas Luhmann's Soziologie des Rechts for the publisher Routledge.

When the ISA, through Margaret Archer's initiative, resolved to establish a new journal which would be equally accessible to sociologists world-wide, no matter what language they commanded, the presence of Liz in Cardiff was an essential ingredient in the formula which led to the founding of International Sociology with its first issue in 1986. She was completely in command of correspondence with authors and with all language editing and preparation for publication. Everyone benefitted from the loving care she devoted to their work, and many became close friends through correspondence which often continued for years after the initial contact. The co-editing of the volume specially prepared for the Madrid Congress, Globalization, Knowledge and Society (1990 London: SAGE) entirely from notable contributions to the journal in its first four years, was only the most public evidence of her work.

Such was her dedication that she uprooted from her Cardiff home in 1990 to take the journal to Bielefeld and ensure that the first crucial change of editorial work but also the general administration of the Journal, liaison with the publisher and with the ISA as Secretary to the Publications Committee. Despite the pleasure of all around she felt she could not move yet again, this time to Rome, and so she left her work with the ISA in 1994, though not her letter writing.

She had formed the idea that Crete could become her sanctuary for a more profound life and that she might be able to write on her own account. The experience proved very stressful and she returned to Britain to resume administrative employment but found it very difficult to settle, returning to Crete after her father's death, building a new circle of friends, asking again 'the big question of where we are heading in this uncertain world' as she wrote in a letter, and discovering that 'the most beautiful European words are Greek'.

Liz always looked for the infinite in everyday small things which is why we all benefited from her selfless concern for the details we got wrong. She resisted attempts to guide her into the academic work which her intellect could easily have sustained, preferring always to serve the needs of others. She took the greatest pleasure in small gatherings of friends, preferably with some alcohol, when the threads of her work and feelings were interwoven with theirs. For her the journal was a living ideal, for them she made it human.

She consciously chose a life in Crete in which she wrote 'there is obviously a price to be paid in the 'disenchanted West' for delving into the emotional and semi-mystical 'life-world'. Sociologists will continue to give thanks in our work that we had the privilege of being part of her dream for so long she decided on her 'return to nature'.

Adam Podgórecki 1925-1998 by William M. Evan, University of Pennsylvania

Adam Podgórecki, who did pioneering work in the field of sociology of the law and was a uniquely creative intellectual, died of a heart attack at his home in Ottawa on August 18, 1998. Born in Cracow, where he received his M.A. in Sociology and a Ph.D. in Law at Jagiellonian University, he eventually joined the Faculty of Warsaw University in 1956. He was inspired by Leon Petrazycki's ideas on law and society and Maria Ossowska's pioneering work in the sociology of morality. An independent thinker, Podgórecki soon came into conflict with the academic guardians for the Polish Communist Party devoted to maintaining political orthodoxy.

Recognized internationally for his original ideas, he received many invitations from abroad such as the Law School of Northwestern University, All Souls College, Oxford, the University of Pennsylvania, the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences at Stanford, the Netherlands Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities, and the Center for Socio-Legal Studies at Wolfson College, Oxford.

In 1972 Podgórecki co-founded the first university department in Poland devoted to socio-legal and criminological research. When the university authorities expelled him and a group of his close associates for 'anti-state academic activity', he reluctantly left Poland and, after one and half years at the University of Oxford, he accepted a professorship in sociology at Carleton University in Canada. This finally enabled him to pursue his scholarly work free of the political constraints in his homeland.

During two decades of his exile from Warsaw, Podgórecki conducted an extensive program of scholarly research in Polish as well as in English. Among his 12 books published in Polish, especially noteworthy are his 1962 Sociology of Law and his A Sociological Theory of Law, published in 1991 with Giuffrè, Milano, and republished earlier this year, in Polish.

Among his 14 books published in English, I would like to mention his 1973 Knowledge and Opinion about Law, which he initiated as a collaborative research project with colleagues from various European countries, his 1991 A Theory in the Sociology of Law, and his Multidimensional Sociology, co-authored with his intellectual companion and wife, Maria Los. The most recent of his books are Social Oppression (1993), Polish Society, (1994), and Higher Faculties: A Cross-National Study of University (1997).

I had the good fortune of meeting Adam in 1961 on his first visit to the United States. In the course of a wide-ranging conversation on the problems and challenges of the sociology of law, we decided to submit a proposal to the Secretariat of the International Sociological Association to establish a Research Committee on the Sociology of the Law. Fortunately, our proposal was accepted. Together with colleagues from around the world we initiated a program of conferences and comparative research projects, which are continuing to this day. Adam Podgórecki was also a member of the ISA Executive Committee in 1970-74 and a founding father of the Research Committee on Sociotechnics.

A sociologist steeped in law, philosophy and literature, Podgórecki had a long-standing concern with problems of ethics. Given the diversity of social and political systems, there is a need for a set of transcending moral standards, which Podgórecki sums up his theory of global ethics with some of the following propositions:

1. Those who belong to the category of human beings have a duty to be reliable sponsors for all other living creatures.
2. All living creatures are responsible for the whole environment and universe which they share.
3. According to global ethics a human being is not the 'lord of other living creatures', but a cohabitant on the same planet. Human beings have a double responsibility because of their ability to diagnose the present and forecast the process of decomposition and destruction (Podgórecki, Si-Tien: The Unknown Chinese Thinker, Carleton University Press, Ottawa 1993, pp. 77-79.)

The core of Podgórecki's theory of 'global ethics' was developed more than 30 years ago when his idea of human beings as custodians of the Earth, rather than its masters, was a radical departure from occidental conceptions.

Podgórecki's scholarly work evoked the admiration of social scientists throughout the world. We will miss his brilliance, his wit and his integrity.

From the incoming Editor of International Sociology

Saïd Amir Arjomand

It is a great privilege and challenge to take over the editorship of International Sociology on the eve of the new millennium, and a decade after a major turning point in world history. Coming on the crest of continuous technological and socio-cultural change, the dramatic political events of 1989 marked a turning point in world history as major as the industrial and democratic revolutions. The 'long twenty-first century' they inaugurated promises to comprise a global social transformation as momentous as the Great Transformation that gave birth to classical sociology. The international sociological community in our generation faces the challenge of understanding the current epochal transformation in historical and comparative perspectives. International Sociology is far better placed than the major national sociological journals to lead this historic enterprise; and I take my professional responsibility as its incoming Editor at this critical juncture most seriously.

As the journal of the International Sociological Association, International Sociology will continue to represent the research and scientific interests of its members. At the same time, it can and should meet the above challenge. The classic themes of social change, development and modernization, with their significant recent extensions - globalization and world economic, political and cultural systems - have gained new life with the expansion of the markets, the rule of law and democracy, and the human rights revolution. It is natural for International Sociology to be in the forefront of research in these fields. These are obvious domains of sociological inquiry, and yet Sociology has not responded to the challenge of covering them as readily as have such neighboring disciplines as Political Science.

The present editorial policy of publishing special issues will be continued, and one of the four yearly issues will be used for the promotion of significant themes in international sociology. In identifying such themes for special issues, I would be grateful for advice from different Research Committees of the ISA. The new location of International Sociology in the United States should also have long-term consequences. The sociological community in the United States is at present under-represented in international sociological research, membership in the ISA, and contributions to and readership of International Sociology. This relative parochialism of American sociology can and should be remedied. As the incoming Editor, I consider it my responsibility to encourage the participation of the American sociological community in International Sociology and will urge other members of the editorial team in the United States to do the same.

Editorship of the Sage Studies in International Sociology

The Publications Committee of the ISA is seeking a successor to Neil Guppy, whose term as Editor of the Sage Studies in International Sociology will come to an end in 1999.

Sage Studies in International Sociology is a series of edited volumes, many of which contain papers presented at World Congresses of Sociology. Nearly 50 volumes have been published since the series was launched in 1974. The policy is to publish at least two volumes each year.

The ISA is seeking an outstanding sociologist with wide intellectual interests who will be able to secure the publication of high quality work of truly international interest. The comparative focus of many volumes is one of the series' most distinctive characteristics.

The Editor of the series is expected to ensure that all published chapters meet the highest standards of linguistic accuracy (in either English or French). A modest degree of financial or material support from the Editor's institution is also required. The Editor will also serve as a member of the ISA Publications Committee.

The Editor will be appointed for an initial period of four years, but the appointment may be extended with the approval of the ISA Publications Committee.

Enquiries should be addressed to the Chair of the Selection Committee:
Christine Inglis
Department of Demography and Sociology
Research School of Social Sciences
Australian National University
Canberra ACT 0200, Australia
fax 61-2-62493031, email: cinglis@coombs.anu.edu.au

Applications, containing (a) a statement of plans for the series (b) a full c.v., and (c) a note about institutional support, should reach the Chair of the selection committee no later than 15th January 1999.

Journal of Interdisciplinary Studies

Journal of Interdisciplinary Studies, an International Journal of Interdisciplinary and Interfaith Dialogue, seeks manuscripts for an issue on The Restoration of Philosophy: Interdisciplinary Perspectives. There is a growing liberal-moderate-conservative consensus that the contemporary crisis of society, East and West, is due not so much to material constraints, lack of information, or technological innovation, but rather a shortage of virtue - the classical Greek arete or excellence and the cardinal Pauline virtues of faith, hope and love. Could philosophy provide the key to rediscovering a culture of virtue and a more civil society and community in an increasingly interdependent world? And would such a philosophy have to embrace all knowledge, truth, and faith as sophia and paideia?

Deadline for submitting manuscripts: 1 January 1999. Send 3 both-sided copies of 15-25 pages and 150-word abstract, typed, double-spaced, in-text citation format, author identification on a separate sheet only to: O. Gruenwald, JIS Editor, IIR, 1065 Pine Bluff Drive, Pasadena, CA 91107, USA.

Punishment & Society will publish high quality papers that deal with key issues in penal theory, penal law and penal practice, and with the philosophical, cultural or historical aspects of punishment that are of interest to a wide international readership. For more information, including submission details and special introductory subscription rates, please contact Jonathan Carter, Journals Marketing Manager, SAGE Publications, 6 Bonhill Street, London EC2A 4PU, UK, fax: 44-171-374 8741, email: jonathan.carter@sagepub.co.uk

SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS

Co-sponsored by the ISA, sociological abstracts (sa) includes nonevaluative abstracts of journal articles from more than 2,000 core and discipline-related serials, plus citations of relevant dissertation taken from Dissertation Abstracts International.

Published six times a year, each issue of sa contains the following: a brief user's guide; a table of contents which lists the major sa classifications with their subcategories; an author index; a source index; a subject index; and a supplement International Review of Publications in Sociology consisting of extensive abstracts of selected books published worldwide and enhanced bibliographic citations of book reviews taken from the journals abstracted in the same issue. A Conference Abstracts Supplement (CAS), published annually, contains abstracts of papers presented at various conferences throughout the year.

Selection and coverage: three types of journals have been distinguished in the following order of priority:

Type 1 - Journals published by sociological associations, groups, faculties and institutes, and periodicals containing the word 'sociology' in their titles. These are abstracted fully, irrespective of language of publication.

Type 2 - Journals from such related areas as anthropology, economics, education, medicine, community development, philosophy, statistics, political science, etc. Such journals are abstracted selectively.

Type 3 - Journals from the humanities and journals of general circulation wherein scholars and laymen publish discussions or criticism of sociology and sociological topics. These journals are abstracted selectively.

Publishers and editors are urged to send copies of new publications for abstracting.
