Special Newsletter Edition

March 2012

with preliminary program for the Second ISA Forum of Sociology
Buenos Aires, Argentina, 1-4 August 2012

Dear Colleagues:

I'm writing to send you the preliminary program for the ISA Forum in Buenos Aires on the theme "Democratizing Futures: Social Quests for Justice and Participation". We received a new record number of submissions and had to make many tough decisions in the selections. Some of the sessions attracted over up to sixty papers each. We obtained two more session slots in January and have asked for more in order to overcome severe space constraints. We're expecting some re-shuffling after early conference registration closes on April 10. We should also get sometime after that deadline details about rooms and schedules.

GRANTS: The winners of ISA grants were individually notified and their names will be posted over the next few days on the ISA website. Apologies to all of whom we could not assist with an award. We gave priority to junior scholars, and only applicants from B and C countries were eligible for travel grants. The limited amount of funds is a gross mismatch to the intellectual vibrancy in our committee.

BUSINESS MEETING: One of our regular time-slots will be reserved for an RC07 Business Meeting. One thing I'd like to establish is a Prize for the best paper written by a graduate student in order to promote future-relevant work among young scholars and lend them some support and recognition. Please let me know of anything you'd like to add to the agenda.

SOCIAL EVENT: Despite all work, let's also think about a social gathering, perhaps best to be held on the evening of Thursday, Aug. 2. I explored already some nearby restaurants during my visit to Buenos Aires last summer but please do let me know if you have local knowledge or suggestions and if you would like to help coordinating it.

MEMBERSHIP: Please encourage colleagues and students working on future-related issues to join not only ISA but also RC07. Membership figures are being used to determine the budget we get allocated from ISA, the grants we can disburse, and the number of sessions we can convene during the next World Congress. We enjoyed over the last few years a tremendous increase in the number of members, and let's keep growing to promote research that is relevant for our future. RC07 membership starts at a low $10 for four years.

PUBLICATIONS: If you haven't seen it yet, RC07's monograph on values and culture is now also available online on the website for the ISA journal CURRENT SOCIOLOGY:

<http://csi.sagepub.com/content/59/2.toc>

Another edited volume with papers from Gothenburg is in progress. First steps are also underway in exploring the possibility of a new journal.

NEWSLETTER: Our new editor Scott North is preparing the next Newsletter. Please send him any short essay, thought-piece or other material to be considered for inclusion: isarc07newsletter@gmail.com

I thank all who are contributing paper and especially our session organizers for their hard work and intellectual courage in preparing what promises to be an exciting conference. Many thanks go to Michael Burawoy, Margaret Abraham, and Raquel Sosa, and especially to Alberto Bialakowsky and Alicia Palermo, the co-chairs of the Local Organizing Committee, and to María Ana González, our committee's national liaison in Argentina. They are working with an amazing energy in hammering out countless logistics at the University of Buenos Aires, the host for our Forum.

I'll look forward to seeing most, if not all, of you in Argentina.

Best regards,

Markus S. Schulz, PhD
President, ISA-RC07

Democratizing Futures

Social Quests for Equality and Participation

How can we create more democratic futures? How do assumptions and aspirations about the future influence daily routines and long-term collective lives? What defines the horizon of social imaginaries? How do we need to rethink democracy in the age of advanced globalization? How can pressing problems such as global climate change, environmental degradation, hunger or violence be tackled in sustainable ways? What is to be done to democratize governance, infrastructure, production, media, and technology? How can the distribution of goods, risks and opportunities be made more equitable? How are different forces positioned to shape futures? What can be learned by comparing social struggles in different countries and settings? How do emancipatory movements and everyday practices at the grassroots resist discipline, exploitation, and misrecognition? What visions for alternative futures are imaginable, desirable, and achievable? What are the roadmaps for social transformation? How can future-oriented social research relate to broader public debates? – These and other questions related to futures research are discussed in a series of sessions welcoming diverse theoretical, empirical, and practical approaches, including interdisciplinary collaboration.

Forum Registration is now open:

<http://www.isa-sociology.org/buenos-aires-2012/forum-registration-fees.htm>.

In order to be included in the program, all participants (presenters, chairs, discussants, etc.) need to pay the registration fee by the early registration deadline April 10, 2012. The names of those not registered will be dropped from the program. Fees are discounted for ISA members and structured according to country category. For any registration queries please contact Congrex Sweden AB per email <isa2010@congrex.com> or fax: +46 31 708 60 25.

Membership Registration: Please make sure your membership with the ISA and RC07 is current. Membership registration can be done online via the ISA's secure site:

<https://secured.com/~f3641/formisa.htm>

(in Spanish: <https://secured.com/~f3641/formisae.htm>).

In case you are already a member of ISA, but not yet of our research committee, you may also use the attached membership form. Please note that the regular membership period is four year, i.e. a registration done in 2012 will be valid until 2015. Please contact <isa-secretariat@isa-sociology.org> for questions.

Papers Due: Session Chair(s) determine the due date for full papers. If other specific date is set, then papers should be send to the Chair(s) and, if applicable, to the Discussants, by June 30, 2012.

Presentation Format: Unless specified otherwise by the Chair of your session and depending on the number of participants in your session, you may expect to have approximately 10-20 minutes time for your presentation. Observing any set time limit is important in order to allow time for collective discussion at the end of a session. Following ISA procedures, some papers may have been designated as "distributed paper" in the acceptance letter or program. A distributed paper will be listed in the program and, provided the author pre-registers in time, the abstract will be included in the abstracts catalogue. If one of the scheduled presenters does not show up, the first participant listed under distributed papers may be asked to present; in any case, session chairs may also allocate time for brief summary presentation. Registered participants who are unable to present in person should contact their session chair to arrange distribution of their paper.
